900 missing off Argentine cruiser

By United Press International

Argentina said Monday its second-largest war ship, the cruiser General Belgrano, sank from a British submarine torpedo attack and 919 of its 1,042-man crew were unaccounted for after a day-long sea search.

The official Argentine news agency Telam, meanwhile, claimed 1 British-speaking residents of the Falkland Islands were killed in twin British air strikes Saturday on the island air strip.

It also quoted "well-placed sources" as saying British ships now were within 50 miles of the Falklands — possibly for a major landing assault.

Earlier Monday, an Argentine patrol boat was sunk and another was heavily damaged in a British helicopter attack within the 200-mile blockade zone.

In a communique, the Argentine joint chiefs of staff said rescue ships sailed to the wind-whipped icy South Atlantic waters, 140 miles southeast of Tierra del Fuego, where several life-boats from the Belgrano were spotted.

By 8 p.m. MDT, 123 crewmen had been rescued in seas up to 40 feet. All hospitals and clinics in southern coastal parts were on alert to treat the survivors.

The Defense Ministry said it would not interfere with rescue operations, "obviously would attack people ... but it is the-rescue," it spokesman said.

The Argentine Foreign Ministry called the attack a "treacherous act of armed aggression" in "open violation" of the United Nations charter.

At the United Nations, Argentine representatives told Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar that at least 500 crewmen were killed, U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick said. "In my view, this is a very dangerous situation," she said.

The nuclear-powered Conqueror, a hunter-killer British submarine escorting two frigates, torpedoed the Belgrano Sunday outside the 200-mile British sea-and-air blockade because it "was a threat to our men," British Defense Minister John Nott said in justifying the attack.

Argentina, claiming it never "employed any more force than necessary," accused Britain of sharply escalating the fighting by attacking 36 miles outside the blockade zone.

Its forces have been told they "now can attack whatever ship of the (British) fleet anywhere, even outside the exclusion zone, because it was not respected by the submarine."

The Argentine foreign ministry also claimed the torpedo assault violated the U.N. charter and "the halt to hostilities ordered by resolution 502 of the Security Council."

The Foreign Ministry did not mention that resolution 502 also demands an immediate Argentine withdrawal from the Falklands, which it seized April 2.

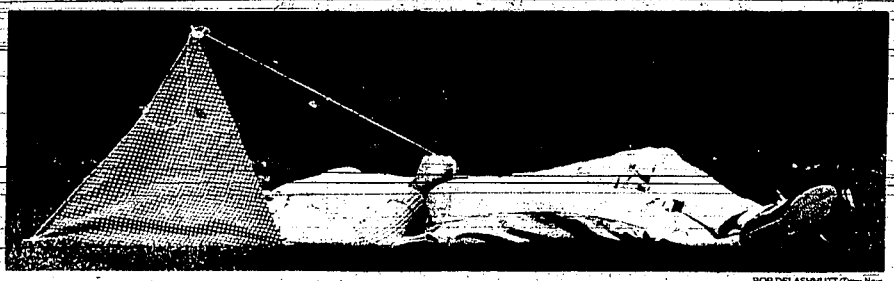

The Argentine Embassy in Washington claimed the British sub may have been helped by "means other than those of the British fleet" — suggesting American spy data located the ship for the British. The statement did not mention the United States.

State Department spokesman Joseph Reap denied the allegation and said "we deeply regret the loss of lives" from the Belgrano sinking.

'High' on geometry

Several Twin Falls High School math students got "high" on geometry Monday, as they attempted to fly homemade kites designed with geometric principles. The students' kites were graded on design, construction and performance. Laurie Tomlinson (top left) found her kite didn't fly well, but she should have received an "A" for designing a tent (bottom). Other students, like Kristy Dunn, found themselves "wrapped up" in their project.

Ticking clock Thatcher foe

Analysis

LONDON (UPI) — The escalating sea and air battle for the Falkland Islands pits Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher against the clock.

Diplomacy and limited warfare cannot coexist for too extended a period and soon Mrs. Thatcher and her war Cabinet will have to make a choice — invade, blockade or negotiate.

The naval attacks which sank a cruiser and patrol craft, the shooting down of Argentine planes and the crippling bomb attack on Port Stanley's airport — all claimed by Britain — are clear signals to Argentina that Britain will not shrink from open warfare should the crisis demand.

But defense officials declare absolutely that no state of war exists and Mrs. Thatcher continues to pursue a solution through diplomacy.

To that end, she has sent Foreign Secretary Francis Pym to the United Nations to seek possible avenues of negotiation.

"The door remains open, but our strategy has been to increase and exert pressure on the Argentines to make them realize that their aggression does not pay," Pym told reporters.

The military pace has rapidly increased and Mrs. Thatcher and her advisers know they can't delay much longer in setting out a definitive Falkland strategy.

Should Pym fail and other outside negotiations not take hold, Britain will have to concentrate on military pressure, even if it leads to full-scale confrontation.

One military option being studied is forcing Argentina to negotiate by starving its forces on the Falklands through enforcement of the 200-mile air and naval quarantine.

Without the airport, supplying the estimated 9,000 Argentine troops — who need up to 15 tons of food daily and have only one water filtration plant — will require Argentina eventually to attempt to break the blockade or talk.

If Britain successfully keeps supplies from the Argentine force — which could take up to 30 days — the South Americans could be forced to negotiate from a poor bargaining position.

The drawback, according to military experts, is that the longer the fleet stays in hostile waters and wretched weather, the more likely a disaster, either by attack or accident.

Britain might, therefore, decide on invading to wrest the Falklands from Argentina.

But that too could take time.

Military commentators say much of the 60 ship fleet is not in position, and prudence would require the task force commander to wait until all his forces were in place before a full-scale assault. Also, heavy casualties could result, casting Britain into the role of aggressor in world opinion.

Through all this, Mrs. Thatcher must continue to rally political and public support at home.

Time is also crucial there. So far, the public — and to a large extent — politicians support the prime minister, but should there be significant British casualties, support could quickly turn into condemnation.

Payoff in propaganda

Daily Telegraph, London

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union is expected to make full propaganda capital out of Britain's military action in the Falklands but Western diplomats strongly doubt that the Soviet Union wants to get directly involved.

The Soviet press is also using the crisis to point to "aggression by a major NATO country" and to drive wedges between the United States and Latin America.

Western diplomats in Moscow expect these propaganda attacks to be intensified in the wake of the weekend's fighting. But some diplomats distinguish between the opportunism of the Soviet press and a more cautious line taken by Soviet foreign ministry officials in private.

It appears, the diplomats say, that the Soviet foreign ministry is well aware of the weaknesses in Argentina's arguments and Soviet officials seem reluctant to espouse them too strongly.

The weekend fighting is thought likely to produce high-profile Soviet posturing on the side of peace and the Third World but little in the way of further concrete backing for the Argentines.

Summit fever fleeting as blossoms in spring

By LARS-ERIK NELSON
New York Daily News

WASHINGTON — A brief bout of summit fever seized Washington Monday, but it proved as fleeting as the spring blossoms.

President Reagan, officials said, has no plans to meet Soviet President Brezhnev this fall.

This is not to say, they added quickly, that a summit will not take place. But no invitation has come from Brezhnev, no acceptance has been sent by Reagan and no preparations for a meeting are being made.

Such are the ways of Washington, however, that nobody, including senior White House officials, knows exactly who or what to believe.

Monday's speculation was ignited when The Washington Post published a column saying Reagan "will accept" an invitation from Brezhnev.

Unfortunately, said top White House officials, it was all untrue. Brezhnev, who proposed a possible summit with Reagan in an interview with Pravda three weeks ago, never followed the idea up with a formal invitation — or even with a serious informal discussion through diplomatic channels.

The official administration response to the press speculation was to reassert President Reagan's casual invitation to Brezhnev to drop by the United Nations special conference on disarmament next month for an informal "get-together" — a proposal Brezhnev has formally spurned.

"We regret that the initial Soviet response was not positive," White House and State Department spokesmen said in unison Monday. "We hope the Soviet side will reconsider and that Presidents Brezhnev and Reagan will be able to meet in June in New York.

"With regard to a full-fledged summit in October, we will carefully consider this possibility in the light of events and the substance of our bilateral dialogue over the coming months."

In other words, a definite "maybe," provided the Russians don't invade Poland or Iran, or sink the British Navy off Argentina in the next five minutes.

But so far, said a top White House official, "there have been no negotiations, no arrangements, not even any serious discussion with (Soviet Ambassador Anatoly) Dobrynin. There has just been sort of a vague sense of 'Wouldn't it be nice.'"

Magic Valley health officials reject 'informing' on teens

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A proposed federal regulation that would require parents to be notified if their daughters receive birth-control prescriptions has provoked an outburst of criticism from Magic Valley health officials.

Officials at the South Central District Health Department, which sponsors family-planning clinics, say the regulation would discourage teenagers from seeking contraceptives — but not from having sex. The result would be more unwanted pregnancies and family trauma, they say.

But other Magic Valley residents favor the regulation, saying it would bring families together in dealing with concerns about teenage sex.

The regulation has not been approved yet, but after a wire service story on the proposal ran Sunday in The Times-News, a health department official said the number of teenagers attending Monday's family-planning clinic decreased noticeably.

The rule, proposed by the federal Department of Health and Human Services, requires that federally funded family-planning clinics notify, within 10 days, the parents of girls under 18 when the girls are prescribed contraceptive pills, intrauterine devices or diaphragms.

Clinics also would have to verify that the notice was received. Exceptions could be made only when physical harm would result.

The rule does not forbid the prescribing of contraceptives to minors. However, parents "should be afforded the opportunity to have input into a decision to use them," according to HHS officials.

"Individuals will generally benefit from the exercise of a parent's mature judgment on their behalf on matters that may affect their physical well-being," HHS officials say.

However, local health officials say their family-planning clinics already encourage parents' involvement in their teenager's decisions concerning birth control.

"This new legislation would mandate this policy and change our role from an advocate for their (teenagers') health concerns to an informer who can no longer be trusted," Gerald Hurst, the department director, and Cheryl Juntunen, the district's physical health director, wrote in a letter to Richard Schweiker, the HHS secretary.

"Healthy parent-child communication cannot be legislated," they wrote.

Health officials primarily are concerned that many teenagers will continue to have sex without taking precautions. Idaho's out-of-wedlock births numbered 1,532 in 1980, a 14 percent increase over the previous year. About 46 percent were to women 19 and under.

The South Central Health Department now sponsors family-planning clinics in Twin Falls, Burley and Rupert. From October through December, almost 600 clients were served. About 29 percent were 18 or under.

All persons seeking birth-control devices must attend a class explaining various contraception methods, "including abstinence," says Judy Bean, the district's family planning coordinator.

After attending the class, clients have a physical, a pap smear and other lab work. Girls with a history of heart problems who desire the pill will

Tapes from hearing released

BOISE (UPI) — A preliminary hearing in which prosecutors outlined a history of bank transactions allegedly used by Jack Lee White to embezzle funds from the Boise Education Association was opened to public view for the first time Monday — nearly three weeks after it occurred.

Tape recordings of the first day of the two-day hearing April 13 and 15 were released Monday by Fourth District Court officials after Magistrate George Carey last week granted an Idaho Press Club motion to open the transcripts to the public.

The motion was part of the Press Club's challenge of a state law that requires the closure of a preliminary hearing in a criminal case at the request of defense counsel.

The first installment was dominated by the testimony of three Boise bank officials concerning transactions allegedly made by White from early 1979 through late 1981. White resigned from the association in November of last year after 11 years in the post.

After the closed preliminary hearings in April, the former union official was bound over to district court by Carey to face felony embezzlement and forgery charges.

White, 45, was due to be arraigned in District Court Monday, but the proceeding was continued until May 10 by Judge Ray Durtschi.

Prayer measure in offing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan will announce support of a proposed constitutional amendment authorizing voluntary group prayer in public schools, administration sources said Monday night.

Reagan plans to make his announcement Thursday, which he proclaimed a National Day of Prayer.

Five times Congress has rejected proposals for school-sponsored prayer since the Supreme Court ruled in 1962 that it was unconstitutional.

Fire in Montana contained

JORDAN, Mont. (UPI) — Firefighters have contained the 7,500-acre Lost Creek Fire in the rugged Missouri River breaks of east-central Montana.

The Bureau of Land Management said Monday the blaze, which burned spots totaling 7,500 acres within an area of 9,000 acres, was contained about 3 p.m. a BLM spokesman said. It had burned since Friday.

Flames consumed timber and grass on 750 acres of private land, 2,250 acres of BLM land, 550 acres of state land and 4,000 acres of the C.M. Russell National Wildlife Refuge.

Weapons funding debated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate was urged Monday to authorize a record $180.2 billion military weapons program for 1983, only $3.2 billion less than President Reagan requested.

But one senator said Congress should first agree on the overall size of the budget and then determine the Pentagon's share.

Nuclear weapons voted out

GARRETT PARK, Md. (UPI) — The citizens of the affluent, tree-lined Washington, D.C., suburb of Garrett Park voted overwhelmingly Monday to make their town the nation's first "nuclear-weapons-free zone."

By a 245-46 margin, Garrett Park residents chose to prohibit the use of nuclear weapons in, on or over their community of 1,200.

In a village that has only one commercial building and four miles of mostly dead-end streets, there was little likelihood of nuclear weapons activities to begin with — except for the bomb.

Residents such as Eugene McDowell said they wanted to make a statement against nuclear arms they hoped would be heard in nearby Washington and faraway Moscow.

Magana to ignore leftists

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Newly installed President Alvaro Magana Monday ruled out negotiations with leftist guerrillas battling his U.S.-backed government.

"There is nothing to negotiate because the people gave their opinion on March 28," Magana, 56, said in his first news conference since taking office Sunday. "We must make peace — but not through negotiations."

Magana said improvement in human rights in El Salvador would be achieved by defeating the rebels. "When the conflict is reduced to minor proportions, the problems of human rights should end," he said.

Magana said he will name his cabinet by today and expected the new ministers would be sworn in the following day.

UPS talks resume today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Teamsters union and United Parcel Service met for nearly three hours Monday before recessing negotiations to avert a strike Wednesday by 80,000 workers of the nationwide delivery service.

D.J. Yount, spokeswoman for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, said the two sides will resume bargaining today.

A strike would involve UPS pickup and delivery operations for more than 6 million parcels shipped throughout the nation daily. The Greenwich, Conn.-based firm advised clients to confine shipments to nearby areas because packages could be held up in transit by a walkout.

Actor Hugh Marlowe dies

NEW YORK (UPI) — Veteran actor Hugh Marlowe, a central character for 13 years on the NBC daytime drama "Another World," died Sunday of a heart attack at his Manhattan apartment. He was 71.

Marlowe, whose career boasted feature roles in many films and on the stage, had portrayed Jim Matthews on "Another World" since 1969. His last appearance on the series was April 30.

be referred to a private physician. Also, intrauterine devices are seldom prescribed for young women, Bean says. Girls under 14 must have their parents' permission to receive birth-control devices.

When a method is prescribed, the staff reviews its possible hazards with the client, who then signs an "informed consent" sheet. Three-month and six-month checkups are scheduled.

In a year at the clinic, Bean says she knows of only two girls who were not sexually active when they came to the clinic.

"So many of the teens we see are sexually active for a year or more," she says. "Most come in after a pregnancy scare."

Some are referred from the venereal disease clinic.

Bean says about half of the health department's clients already tell their parents, and often, mothers bring their daughters to the clinic.

The mother of three, including two teenagers, Bean contends that "for us as health providers to 'turn informers' and 'drop the bomb' on parents is not only a direct conflict to our ethical responsibility as patient confidante, but has potential disastrous implications for parent-teenager relationships.

"I would resent a health provider calling me to say, 'Mrs. Bean, did you know that your daughter was given birth-control pills in our clinic 10 days ago?'"

But several Magic Valley parents say they would want to know just that.

Paul Reynolds, the president of the Parents, Teachers and Student Association at Twin Falls High School, says that children are ultimately a parent's responsibility.

"The family should be notified," he says. Principals call homes to tell parents if students are caught cutting class or smoking. Parents' reactions may be "total shock." Yet as a parent, "I would like to be aware of it."

Karen Cole, the president of the Twin Falls district PTA and the mother of eight children, says she, too, "would want to know." Not only that, "I think when the child is under age, the parents have a right to know."

However, Hurst maintains that Idaho law defines a person's capability of receiving contraceptives as "being sufficiently intelligent and mature to understand the nature and significance thereof."

There's definitely a health risk with IUDs and oral contraceptives, Bean acknowledges. However, diaphragms, covered under the notification rule, have no known health risks, she says. Still, the majority of the clinic's clients are prescribed oral contraceptives.

Bean contends that unplanned pregnancy poses a great health risk to teenagers. She also thinks the notification rule might spark a "black market" in pills, which could endanger their users.

Health officials say that verifying parental notification also would burden the department with extra paperwork at a time when family-planning funds have been cut 37 percent.

But even in unwanted pregnancies, "the fault still rests on the family. Family responsibility will be the only solution," Reynolds says.

"Someday, that child will be a parent and have the right to dictate what's right for their son or daughter," Cole says.

Health board member Rick Brailsford says: "Parents have a right to know, but lordy knows, you're not going to stop it."

All persons contacted by The Times-News say that teenage sexuality is a growing problem. Early sexual activity not only has emotional consequences for young people, but it has been linked to a higher incidence of cervical cancer in women, Bean says.

Education, many say, can combat the problem. Sharon Fisher, a Magic Valley Memorial Hospital nurse who has talked with high-school students about sexuality, finds that even in our supposedly "open" society, teenagers are uninformed about sex. Such myths as "you can't get pregnant the first time" continue to make the rounds, she says.

Senators seek wider NATO support

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three senators, concerned about dissension among the NATO nations, urged President Reagan Monday to propose that the alliance develop a common weapons policy and improve its conventional forces.

Sens. William Roth, R-Del., John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Sam Nunn, D-Ga., introduced a non-binding resolution urging Reagan to propose an alliance-wide system.

Idaho primary date stands

SANDPOINT (UPI) — First District Judge Dar Cogswell refused Monday to postpone the May 25 primary election while he mediates a legal battle over Idaho's new legislative reapportionment law.

Cogswell declined to grant a preliminary injunction to halt the primary because he said it would be "unfair to everybody concerned" and "a great inconvenience."

Such an order could cause chaos this close to the election, Cogswell said.

In other rulings, Cogswell dropped Gov. John Evans from the list of defendants in the suit and ordered that the suit be treated as a class action against Idaho's 44 county clerks and Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa.

The suit will be discussed before Cogswell again May 17. He will hear arguments about the constitutionality of the reapportionment statute and whether the November general election should be suspended until a new plan could be drawn.

The suit contends the reapportionment law passed by the 1982 Legislature violated the Idaho Constitution by dividing counties and unreasonably favored incumbents.

Raymond Givens of Coeur d'Alene, representing the plaintiffs, said Evans was dropped from the suit because he has nothing directly to do with the election process — the focus of the injunctions sought in the suit. He said Evans, a Democrat, was originally included in the complaint so it would not be perceived that the suit was politically motivated against the main defendant, Republican Cenarrusa.

The state attorney general's office probably will represent Idaho's 44 county clerks in addition to Cenarrusa, officials said.

Cogswell said he probably wouldn't make any final rulings on the case at the May 17 hearing. He said he would take evidence under advisement and issue decisions later.

Idaho Power lets contract

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. Monday awarded a contract for general construction of a 12.8-megawatt power plant to Bechtel Civil and Minerals, Inc., of San Francisco.

"We selected the Bechtel bid of about $5.75 million for construction and equipment installation at Cascade after a careful evaluation of all five bids," said Clifford E. Bissell, Idaho Power vice president for power plant construction and operations. "All factors considered, we believe this to be the lowest bid."

Construction on the plant near Cascade is expected to begin this month, with completion scheduled for mid-1983, officials said. Morrison-Knudsen Co. Inc. of Boise completed excavation for the facility at the base of Cascade Dam earlier this year, they said.

Some candidates answer N. Idaho group

Moral Majority backs off questions

BOISE (UPI) — A spokesman for the national Moral Majority disavowed Monday a questionnaire distributed by a North Idaho group that claims to be an affiliate of the parent organization.

Only three of nine statewide or congressional candidates canvassed Monday said they responded to questions distributed by the Idaho group.

But six in the group of Republican and Democratic candidates questioned said they probably would answer at least some of the inquiries, most likely limiting their responses to political — not religious — issues.

Those who already have answered the questions distributed by the group calling itself the "Moral Majority (of the) Idaho Panhandle Area" in some form are Lt. Gov. Phil Batt and House Speaker Ralph Olmstead, both GOP candidates for governor, and Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

Cal Thomas, vice president for communications for Moral Majority, said in a telephone interview from his Lynchburg, Va., office that he had no record of a local affiliate calling itself "Moral Majority (of the) Idaho Panhandle Area" or its director, Ray Fitzhugh of Hayden Lake.

Thomas also blasted the content of some of the personal and religiously oriented questions contained in the questionnaire, which was distributed to candidates seeking statewide office, congressional hopefuls and those running for local posts in Idaho's two northernmost legislative districts.

Buddy Hoffman, state chairman of the Moral Majority, said the North Idaho group hadn't signed affiliation papers with the national organization — but he said he believed neither Fitzhugh, pastor of the Grace Bible Church in Hayden Lake, nor his followers had "done anything out of line that would embarrass or not be in congruency with policies and major principles of the Moral Majority."

The questionnaire surfaced last week when First Congressional District candidate Larry LaRocco, a Democrat, said the inquiries about drinking habits, marital status and beliefs about life after death were "clearly out of line."

Second Congressional District candidate Richard Stallings, Rexburg, said Monday he planned to respond to at least some of the questions. But he echoed other candidates' concerns, saying some of the inquiries — such as, ". . . are you 100 percent sure that you would go to heaven?" — were "too personal."

Fitzhugh said the questionnaire had been written locally — and information obtained from candidates would be used in a voting guide the group will publish. He denied questions were too personal.

Most candidates said they had no trouble answering about half the inquiries on the 39-question document. Those pertaining to gun control, abortion, equal rights, capital punishment and prayer in public school were not objectionable, they said.

But included among the questions they disliked answering were:

"Do you oppose social drinking?

"Are you presently in your first marriage?

"Do you attend church? If you answered yes, how often?

"What denomination?

"Do you believe that some day you will have to give an account of your life to God?"

Appeals court cuts into backlog

BOISE (UPI) — The formation of the Idaho Court of Appeals has allowed the state's court system to begin cutting into an appellate case backlog that has been growing for years.

Appeals Court Judge Donald Burnett said the court, which went into operation at the beginning of the year, now is deciding cases faster than they're being brought in.

"They've not been simple, single-issue cases, either," Burnett said, adding that the panel is deciding cases that "develop law," not just those that arise on ordinary technical or procedural grounds.

The new court was set up to handle many of the cases that had been going to the Idaho Supreme Court — and in many instances getting caught in a multi-year backlog.

Until this year, the Supreme Court handled all cases appealed from trial courts and from the Industrial Commission and Public Utilities Commission. Under the new system, the Supreme Court retains cases "where there is a substantial public interest," cases involving major constitutional interpretations, cases where a law is challenged, and those specifically assigned to the court by law. Other appeals go to the Appeals Court.

Burnett said, however, it has turned out that the Appeals Court deals with more than "routine" appeals.

"We've had cases that have had a pretty substantial impact on Idaho law," he said. "The sharing has resulted in legally significant cases going to both courts."

Among those were cases which, he said:

•Determined how community property can be changed by actions taken by husbands and wives.

•Defined an injured person's right to recover damages in "crash worthiness" cases — those involving badly designed cars or similar products.

•Upheld the Idaho rape statute against a challenge that said it doesn't offer equal protection to men and women.

On the day the Appeals Court took form, the Supreme Court assigned it 150 cases. Burnett said that at the present rate of decision — 33 concluded as of last week — all those cases should be cleared by soon after the beginning of 1983.

Officers search river for missing Boisean

BANKS (UPI) — Lawmen from the Boise County Sheriff's Office and the Horseshoe Bend Police Department combed the muddy waters of the Payette River Monday searching for the body of a 28-year-old man presumed drowned when a raft capsized.

A sheriff's spokesman said more than a dozen searchers returned to the south fork of the river Monday to continue the effort to find Tom Gibbons, Boise, who was lost Sunday afternoon when a raft with four people aboard overturned.

The three survivors — Brenda Sheppard, 23, Al Thornock, 25, and Sally Terrall, 18, all of Boise — swam to shore. They were later treated and released from St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

The spokesman said Monday's search was centered on a stretch of the river below Banks and several miles downstream from the site of the mishap. Mountain search and rescue teams had been called to conduct a search of the bank while officers probed the icy waters and underbrush which overhangs the river, he said.

Survivors of the accident told police they never saw Gibbons again after the boat capsized.

League rankings worth close look

We hope you caught the story last week in The Times-News on the rankings by the Idaho Conservation League of area legislators for their votes on conservation issues in the 1982 legislative session.

While there are some exceptions, the rankings suggest that area legislators generally voted against environmental or conservation bills, or at least against the league's position on those issues.

The bills included planning and zoning rejection, salmon poaching, air-quality funding, dredge mining, nuclear-power expansion and development of Box Canyon.

Among Magic Valley legislators, rankings ranged from 8 percent for Sen. Wilson Steen, R-Glenns Ferry, to 93 percent for Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey. Most area legislators ranged from 20 to 30 percent.

Why so low? Rep. Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, who got a 23 percent rating from the league, observes that many legislators oppose locking up resources arbitrarily. Some development, he notes, is necessary, and "we've proven we can do it without destroying the land or environment."

We think he has a point, but we think the low ratings also should raise questions in voters' minds, considering the outdoor orientation of many Magic Valley citizens.

We also hope legislators resist the temptation to turn low league rankings to quick political advantage in this year's elections. It is easy, after all, to paint any conservation group as pointy-headed and anti-growth.

We think the league's rankings deserve thoughtful consideration. While we don't always agree with its positions, the league is concerned with issues that are critical ones to Idaho's intelligent use of natural resources.

As a lobby, the league often has helped define the debate on how Idaho's great beauty and quality of life can be preserved within a climate of intelligent growth. We think its ratings of legislators are a helpful part of that process, and we urge citizens to consider them.

Budget is the milkman's problem

One of the things the American people pay their president and their legislators for is to handle the United States budget. It's a messy job, and most of us are too busy to deal with it.

That's why there has been a lot of anger by the average citizen over the impasse between the administration and Congress.

Klondike, my milkman, told me, "I can't deal with it. Why is the president appealing to me?"

"He has nowhere else to turn," I told him.

"Reagan's offered to go the extra mile, but the Democrats won't let him walk it."

"What's the problem?"

"It's a question of philosophical differences, based on the fact that the Democrats want to cut the deficit, and Republicans want to give everyone a tax cut."

"I thought the president said when he was running for office, the Democrats were for big deficits, and the Republicans were against them."

"He did say that, but now that he's seen the size of the deficit for next year, he's changed his mind."

"How big is the deficit going to be if Reagan's budget goes through?"

"The Democrats say $180 billion."

"How much will they settle for?" Klondike asked.

"Not one nickel more than $100 billion. Reagan has offered to split the difference, but Tip O'Neill said the deficit is not negotiable."

"Which figure do you like?"

"I've never been one for big government deficits," I admitted, "but I guess I could live with $110 billion if it would make everyone happy."

Klondike asked, "Why can't Reagan and Congress live with it."

"Because we've never had that kind of deficit before. The Democrats predict if Reagan doesn't slash defense spending and eliminate his 10 percent tax cuts, the deficit will grow to $216 billion in 1984 and $233 billion dollars in 1985."

"That's a lot of bread. What is Reagan's answer?"

"He says the only way you can cut the deficit is by getting the economy going again, and the only way you can get the economy rolling is to give everyone their tax cut and build a strong defense for America."

"If makes sense to me," Klondike said. "Maybe I might go along with a $150 billion deficit if that would make Reagan happy."

"But if we have a $150 billion deficit," I said, "that means the government will have to borrow money from the people and interest rates will soar, and there won't be any capital left for getting the private industry back on its feet. At least that's what the Democrats claim."

"What does Reagan say to that?"

"He says the Democrats are just trying to make him look bad, so they'll win the 1982 elections."

"Why would they want to do that?"

"How do I know?" I said testily. "The question is, Klondike, what are you going to do about the U.S. budget for 1983?"

"Why is it my problem?"

"Because Reagan's thrown it in your lap."

To curb drunken driving, fear must become incentive

WASHINGTON — Opinionated to the end, and to a fault, I intend to offer a judgment of my own when God calls me to judgment.

I shall tell him that creation would be better if atoms were unsplittable, if the flora did not include tobacco and if grape and grain did not ferment. This last would be severe, but would solve the problem of drunken driving, a problem that illustrates how small a role reason plays in the life of society.

In America, more people drive than vote, and the automobile is a vehicle of self-expression, as well as transportation. It is an instrument for risk-taking in a society that offers few opportunities for that, now that the frontier is closed and the Comanche are calm. And in America, most entertainment involves driving to and from places where alcohol is consumed.

Drunken drivers do more than ruin their chances in this world and their prospects in the next. They butcher Americans much faster than the Vietnam war did, and they cost society $5 billion each year in court time, rehabilitation, lost earnings and other expenses. Drunken drivers also illustrate an oddity of modern society, the irrational perception of risks.

We spend billions on research to reduce the dangers of disease. But the only substantial public health improvements we could attain by choice, immediately, depend not on diagnostic or pharmacological breakthroughs, but on behavioral changes: smoking less and using automobiles more rationally.

When polio was killing 300 people annually, parents feared for their children. Drunken drivers will kill 86 times that many people this year, yet few Americans are alarmed. They, rightly, are alarmed about violent crime and about handguns, yet drunken drivers account for the most common form of violent death.

When toxic shock killed some women, the publicity killed a product. A few instances of botulism destroyed a soup company. But the public that reacts swiftly to such dangers is not aroused comparably by the fact that a life is lost every 21 minutes in an alcohol-related crash, and one out of every two Americans eventually will be involved in an alcohol-related crash.

Newspapers editorialize about the dangers of commercial nuclear-power plants — which have killed no one — while advertising cigarettes, which will contribute to 340,000 deaths this year. If Americans used seat belts, they would save 28,000 lives this year. But seat-belt use is declining, while anxieties about remote dangers are rising.

Seven-Up is spending millions to market a new cola, the supposed virtue of which is that it contains no caffeine. Passing over the nuttiness of selling soda pop by stressing a health issue, it is unclear why we should add caffeine to the lengthening list of modern worries, or at least why it should rank any higher than, say, the menace of buttered popcorn.

People afraid of flying sigh with relief when they get off a plane and onto a normal highway where, on a normal weekend night, one in 10 drivers is, by the law's definition, drunk.

The president has enlisted in the campaign against drunken driving, but a freshman congressman, Michael Barnes, D-Md., stole the march with legislation proposing, among other things, a strict and national definition of intoxication in terms of blood-alcohol concentration level.

All states should have a drinking age of 21, so teenagers would not be learning to handle cars and alcohol simultaneously. That means, practically, the federal government should legislate a national drinking age. Otherwise, federalism will pose a problem: Teenagers will drive next door to a more liberal state.

Given human nature, fear must frequently do the work of reason. Experience in several states and European countries confirms what common sense suggests: Fear of punishment — punishment sure and severe and well-publicized — influences drinkers who drive.

If punishment is to deter, severity must compensate for uncertainty. When there is only a slight chance that someone committing an offense will be caught, punishment must be fearsome. Only about one of every 2,000 drunken drivers is arrested, and the chance of severe punishment for hurtling out of control in a ton of steel is, today, statistically negligible. What's needed include long suspensions of licenses and mandatory jail terms.

When reform comes, it will be due, in large measure, to MADD — Mothers Against Drunk Driving. Behind this potent organization stretches a line of tiny coffins and small quadriplegics' wheelchairs. MADD is evidence that there is no political force comparable to the fury generated by injuries done to children.

Believe it or not, Teamsters have a sense of morality

This will come as a surprise to some, but the Teamsters union does have a strong sense of morality.

It's overlooked because of the more publicized, unsavory activities of Teamster officials.

For example, when crime syndicate leaders needed large chunks of cash to finance major business projects, such as gambling casinos, they didn't have to go to a bank for a loan, or even rob a bank.

They went to the Teamsters and borrowed millions from the union's huge pension fund.

And when they didn't pay the money back, the Teamsters didn't even turn the account over to a collection agency.

Of course, there always has always been a close relationship between the Teamsters and the crime syndicate.

That's because some Teamster officials also hold active membership in the Mafia. They're real joiners.

An example was Joey Glimco, one of Tony Accardo's henchmen, who used to run the Teamsters local that represented Chicago taxi drivers.

We've also heard a lot about the generous salaries and pensions that top Teamster officials pay themselves.

They're so generous that they get their pensions even if they are sent to prison, which is what happened to Dave Beck, once president of the union, and his successor as president, Jimmy Hoffa.

Unfortunately for Jimmy Hoffa, he didn't enjoy his pension very long after he left prison because some of his former Mafia associates carried him off one day and gave him an informal funeral in a still undetermined burial ground.

And we've all heard about the sweetheart contracts between the Teamsters and favored big businesses, the terror tactics they've used to intimidate small businesses into contracts, the politicians they've bribed and the dissident rank-and-file members they've bullied into silence.

Because of the corruption, murder and other mischief, we've heard little about the other side of the Teamsters — the well-developed sense of morality that I mentioned earlier.

But it's there. If you doubt that, just consider the case of Patra Nelson.

Nelson, 22, of the Chicago suburb of Maywood, is a Teamster. She's a clerical worker at an air freight company.

She's had the job for three years and is considered a good employee.

Last year, Nelson became pregnant. She contacted the union to check on her maternity benefits.

The union told her that her expenses would be covered by the union's health and welfare plan. But not the expenses of the baby.

"Why not my baby?" she asked.

She was told that since she was not married, the baby did not qualify under the program's family plan.

"They told me they had to draw the line somewhere," Nelson says. "I was so upset I just hung up the phone."

Later, she called again. "I thought maybe the person I talked to was mistaken. But I got the same answer. My expenses would be covered. But anything just for the child would be my responsibility.

"It didn't make sense to me. They pay for abortions, so why wouldn't they pay to keep a baby alive? I guess I just didn't want to believe it. I really thought they'd change their minds after the baby was born."

They didn't change their minds.

Nelson went on maternity leave, and four months ago, she gave birth to a girl.

When she returned to work, the hospital sent her a bill for $626.

This figure covered the hospital nursery fee and other costs relating to the baby.

"The union paid for my end of it, but not for the baby's — just like they had told me.

"And in the future, if there's a medical bill for my baby, if she gets sick, the family plan won't cover it. I'll have to pay it, and I don't earn that much.

"I can't believe this. This isn't the 1930s. There are just more single mothers these days, and we shouldn't be penalized. I mean, I work and I pay my union dues. So what makes me and my baby different than a married person who works and pays their dues?"

Several insurance companies talked to about Nelson's case were surprised by the Teamsters' position.

A spokesman for Allstate Insurance said: "When a company purchases a pregnancy benefit package from us, it's for the entire group of women — married or single."

A Travelers Insurance official said: "In almost every case I've seen, the full maternity benefits are also extended to the single female."

A spokesman for Blue Cross-Blue Shield said the same thing.

Nancy Kreiter, the director of Women Employed, a professional women's organization, says it has been a long time since she'd heard of this kind of discrimination. "We never get calls like that any more."

Nobody at the Teamsters Local 705 would discuss their policy on children of unwed mothers. They said only Louie Peick, the Chicago-area union boss, could make a statement, and Peick won't return phone calls.

So don't let anybody tell you that the Teamsters don't have moral positions. They might be tolerant of the crime syndicate, but they're hard-nosed when it comes to those children who used to be known as "bastards."

If there are any bastards in this case, they're sitting behind desks at the Teamsters union hall.

Mostly black jury for Hinckley's trial

The Hinckley trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A judge empaneled a mostly black jury — including a garage attendant, two secretaries and a former juvenile worker — Monday to consider John W. Hinckley Jr.'s insanity plea in the shooting of President Reagan and three others.

The jury of seven women and five men, selected on the fifth day of the trial, includes one white — the daughter of a Milwaukee surgeon who told the judge she has a master's degree in special education and worked with disturbed teenagers.

Shortly after the jury was picked, U.S. Attorney Stanley Harris disclosed he does not expect Reagan to testify as a witness this week when the government presents its case.

In a two-page statement, Harris said since Reagan's testimony "would be quite limited and not essential to the presentation of the fundamental issues," White House officials decided he would not appear in court.

Harris, citing security problems and noting Reagan was pressed for time with international problems, said he went along with the decision. It would have been unprecedented for a sitting president to testify in such a trial.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker said he would not swear in the jury and six alternates, all blacks, until shortly before opening arguments this morning.

"Do not discuss among your fellow jurors any aspect of this case," Parker told the jurors, warning them against reading or listening to news accounts of the trial.

Hinckley, son of a wealthy Colorado oilman, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the March 30, 1981, attack.

New try for budget in offing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House and congressional Republicans, seeking a way to save President Reagan's 1983 budget plans, signaled willingness Monday to try again for a compromise with the Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill.

Reagan, publicly still flexible on the issue, met with his GOP allies on how to approach the second round of budget battles in the aftermath of last week's failed bipartisan efforts.

"It is still my hope that we could go back to the table, to the speaker and others and work out at the congressional level a compromise," said Senate Republican leader Howard Baker after the meeting. He said he plans to contact House Speaker Thomas O'Neill soon to arrange a meeting.

But O'Neill aide Chris Matthews said: "It's like clockwork. Every time the Republican Senate is about begin mark-up of the budget, Senator Baker talks of compromise with the Democrats."

He said the president's own "Republicans won't vote for the Reagan budget, and he knows it."

Senate Budget Committee chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., candidly acknowledged that Reagan's $707 billion budget proposed in February will be rejected by his panel if it comes to an up-or-down vote later this week.

"The president's budget isn't much of an issue any more," Domenici said, explaining that the economic issues have changed since February, necessitating a new script.

Court takes Anderson's challenge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to tackle a political case involving 1980 presidential candidate John Anderson that could smooth the route for independents seeking the White House in 1984.

The justices announced they will hear Anderson's challenge to state election law requirements that make it difficult for third-party and other non-traditional candidates to get on the presidential ballot.

The high court next fall will review a decision upholding Ohio's rules, similar to those in other states, that compel such candidates to qualify for the November ballot months before the deadline for Democrats and Republicans to name their standard-bearers.

Anderson, a former GOP congressman from Illinois who dropped out of the Republican presidential race in 1980 to run on his own, had to file suit to force his way onto the ballot in several states. He won about 7 percent of the vote nationwide.

The Anderson case involves an Ohio law that forces an independent to file a "statement of candidacy."

"He says the only way you can cut the deficit is by getting the economy going again, and the only way you can get the economy rolling is to give everyone their tax cut and build a strong defense for America."

"If makes sense to me," Klondike said. "Maybe I might go along with a $150 billion deficit if that would make Reagan happy."

"But if we have a $150 billion deficit," I said, "that means the government will have to borrow money from the people and interest rates will soar, and there won't be any capital left for getting the private industry back on its feet. At least that's what the Democrats claim."

"What does Reagan say to that?"

"He says the Democrats are just trying to make him look bad, so they'll win the 1982 elections."

"Why would they want to do that?"

"How do I know?" I said testily. "The question is, Klondike, what are you going to do about the U.S. budget for 1983?"

"Why is it my problem?"

"Because Reagan's thrown it in your lap."

To curb drunken driving, fear must become incentive

WASHINGTON — Opinionated to the end, and to a fault, I intend to offer a judgment of my own when God calls me to judgment.

I shall tell him that creation would be better if atoms were unsplittable, if the flora did not include tobacco and, if grape and grain did not ferment. This last would be severe, but would solve the problem of drunken driving, a problem that illustrates how small a role reason plays in the life of society.

In America, more people drive than vote, and the automobile is a vehicle of self-expression, as well as transportation. It is an instrument for risk-taking in a society that offers few opportunities for that, now that the frontier is closed and the Comanche are calm. And in America, most entertainment involves driving to and from places where alcohol is consumed.

Drunken drivers do more than ruin their chances in this world and their prospects in the next. They butcher Americans much faster than the Vietnam war did, and they cost society $5 billion each year in court time, rehabilitation, lost earnings and other expenses. Drunken drivers also illustrate an oddity of modern society, the irrational perception of risks.

We spend billions on research to reduce the dangers of disease. But the only substantial public health improvements we could attain by choice, immediately, depend not on diagnostic or pharmacological breakthroughs, but on behavioral changes: smoking less and using automobiles more rationally.

When polio was killing 300 people annually, parents feared for their children. Drunken drivers will kill 86 times that many people this year, yet few Americans are alarmed. They, rightly, are alarmed about violent crime and about handguns, yet drunken drivers account for the most common form of violent death.

When toxic shock killed some women, the publicity killed a product. A few instances of botulism destroyed a soup company. But the public that reacts swiftly to such dangers is not aroused comparably by the fact that a life is lost every 21 minutes in an alcohol-related crash, and one out of every two Americans eventually will be involved in an alcohol-related crash.

Newspapers editorialize about the dangers of commercial nuclear-power plants — which have killed no one — while advertising cigarettes, which will contribute to 340,000 deaths this year. If Americans used seat belts, they would save 28,000 lives this year. But seat-belt use is declining, while anxieties about remote dangers are rising.

Seven-Up is spending millions to market a new cola, the supposed virtue of which is that it contains no caffeine. Passing over the nuttiness of selling soda pop by stressing a health issue, it is unclear why we should add caffeine to the lengthening list of modern worries, or at least why it should rank any higher than, say, the menace of buttered popcorn.

People afraid of flying sigh with relief when they get off a plane and onto a normal highway where, on a normal weekend night, one in 10 drivers is, by the law's definition, drunk.

The president has enlisted in the campaign against drunken driving, but a freshman congressman, Michael Barnes, D-Md., stole the march with legislation proposing, among other things, a strict and national definition of intoxication in terms of blood-alcohol concentration level.

All states should have a drinking age of 21, so teenagers would not be learning to handle cars and alcohol simultaneously. That means, practically, the federal government should legislate a national drinking age. Otherwise, federalism will pose a problem: Teenagers will drive next door to a more liberal state.

Given human nature, fear must frequently do the work of reason. Experience in several states and European countries confirms what common sense suggests: Fear of punishment — punishment sure and severe and well-publicized — influences drinkers who drive.

If punishment is to deter, severity must compensate for uncertainty. When there is only a slight chance that someone committing an offense will be caught, punishment must be fearsome. Only about one of every 2,000 drunken drivers is arrested, and the chance of severe punishment for hurtling out of control in a ton of steel is, today, statistically negligible. What's needed include long suspensions of licenses and mandatory jail terms.

When reform comes, it will be due, in large measure, to MADD — Mothers Against Drunk Driving. Behind this potent organization stretches a line of tiny coffins and small quadriplegics' wheelchairs. MADD is evidence that there is no political force comparable to the fury generated by injuries done to children.

Believe it or not, Teamsters have a sense of morality

This will come as a surprise to some, but the Teamsters union does have a strong sense of morality.

It's overlooked because of the more publicized, unsavory activities of Teamster officials.

For example, when crime syndicate leaders needed large chunks of cash to finance major business projects, such as gambling casinos, they didn't have to go to a bank for a loan, or even rob a bank.

They went to the Teamsters and borrowed millions from the union's huge pension fund.

And when they didn't pay the money back, the Teamsters didn't even turn the account over to a collection agency.

Of course, there always has always been a close relationship between the Teamsters and the crime syndicate.

That's because some Teamster officials also hold active membership in the Mafia. They're real joiners.

An example was Joey Glimco, one of Tony Accardo's henchmen, who used to run the Teamsters local that represented Chicago taxi drivers.

We've also heard a lot about the generous salaries and pensions that top Teamster officials pay themselves.

They're so generous that they get their pensions even if they are sent to prison, which is what happened to Dave Beck, once president of the union, and his successor as president, Jimmy Hoffa.

Unfortunately for Jimmy Hoffa, he didn't enjoy his pension very long after he left prison because some of his former Mafia associates carried him off one day and gave him an informal funeral in a still undetermined burial ground.

And we've all heard about the sweetheart contracts between the Teamsters and favored big businesses, the terror tactics they've used to intimidate small businesses into contracts, the politicians they've bribed and the dissident rank-and-file members they've bullied into silence.

Because of the corruption, murder and other mischief, we've heard little about the other side of the Teamsters — the well-developed sense of morality that I mentioned earlier.

But it's there. If you doubt that, just consider the case of Patra Nelson.

Nelson, 22, of the Chicago suburb of Maywood, is a Teamster. She's a clerical worker at an air freight company.

She's had the job for three years and is considered a good employee.

Last year, Nelson became pregnant. She contacted the union to check on her maternity benefits.

The union told her that her expenses would be covered by the union's health and welfare plan. But not the expenses of the baby.

"Why not my baby?" she asked.

She was told that since she was not married, the baby did not qualify under the program's family plan.

"They told me they had to draw the line somewhere," Nelson says. "I was so upset I just hung up the phone."

Later, she called again. "I thought maybe the person I talked to was mistaken. But I got the same answer. My expenses would be covered. But anything just for the child would be my responsibility.

"It didn't make sense to me. They pay for abortions, so why wouldn't they pay to keep a baby alive? I guess I just didn't want to believe it. I really thought they'd change their minds after the baby was born."

They didn't change their minds.

Nelson went on maternity leave, and four months ago, she gave birth to a girl.

When she returned to work, the hospital sent her a bill for $626.

This figure covered the hospital nursery fee and other costs relating to the baby.

"The union paid for my end of it, but not for the baby's — just like they had told me.

"And in the future, if there's a medical bill for my baby, if she gets sick, the family plan won't cover it. I'll have to pay it, and I don't earn that much.

"I can't believe this. This isn't the 1930s. There are just more single mothers these days, and we shouldn't be penalized. I mean, I work and I pay my union dues. So what makes me and my baby different than a married person who works and pays their dues?"

Several insurance companies I talked to about Nelson's case were surprised by the Teamsters' position.

A spokesman for Allstate Insurance said: "When a company purchases a pregnancy benefit package from us, it's for the entire group of women — married or single."

A Travelers Insurance official said: "In almost every case I've seen, the full maternity benefits are also extended to the single female."

A spokesman for Blue Cross-Blue Shield said the same thing.

Nancy Kreifer, the director of Women Employed, a professional women's organization, says it has been a long time since she'd heard of this kind of discrimination. "We never get calls like that any more."

Nobody at the Teamsters Local 705 would discuss their policy on children of unwed mothers. They said only Louie Peick, the Chicago-area union boss, could make a statement, and Peick won't return phone calls.

So don't let anybody tell you that the Teamsters don't have moral positions. They might be tolerant of the crime syndicate, but they're hard-nosed when it comes to those children who used to be known as "bastards."

If there are any bastards in this case, they're sitting behind desks at the Teamsters union hall.

Mostly black jury for Hinckley's trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A judge empaneled a mostly black jury — including a garage attendant, two secretaries and a former juvenile worker — Monday to consider John W. Hinckley Jr.'s insanity plea in the shooting of President Reagan and three others.

The jury of seven women and five men, selected on the fifth day of the trial, includes one white — the daughter of a Milwaukee surgeon who told the judge she has a master's degree in special education and worked with disturbed teenagers.

The Hinckley trial

Shortly after the jury was picked, U.S. Attorney Stanley Harris disclosed he does not expect Reagan to testify as a witness this week when the government presents its case.

In a two-page statement, Harris said since Reagan's testimony "would be quite limited and not essential to the presentation of the fundamental issues," White House officials decided he would not appear in court.

Harris, citing security problems and noting Reagan was pressed for time with international problems, said he went along with the decision. It would have been unprecedented for a sitting president to testify in such a trial.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker said he would not swear in the jury and six alternates, all blacks, until shortly before opening arguments this morning.

"Do not discuss among your fellow jurors any aspect of this case," Parker told the jurors, warning them against reading or listening to news accounts of the trial.

Hinckley, son of a wealthy Colorado oilman, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the March 30, 1981, attack.

New try for budget in offing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House and congressional Republicans, seeking a way to save President Reagan's 1983 budget plans, signaled willingness Monday to try again for a compromise with the Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill.

Reagan, publicly still flexible on the issue, met with his GOP allies on how to approach the second round of budget battles in the aftermath of last week's failed bipartisan efforts.

"It is still my hope that we could go back to the table, to the speaker and others and work out at the congressional level a compromise," said Senate Republican leader Howard Baker after the meeting. He said he plans to contact House Speaker Thomas O'Neill soon to arrange a meeting.

But O'Neill aide Chris Matthews said: "It's like clockwork. Every time the Republican Senate is about begin mark-up of the budget, Senator Baker talks of compromise with the Democrats."

He said the president's own "Republicans won't vote for the Reagan budget, and he knows it."

Senate Budget Committee chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., candidly acknowledged that Reagan's $767 billion budget proposed in February will be rejected by his panel if it comes to an up-or-down vote later this week.

"The president's budget isn't much of an issue any more," Domenici said, explaining that the economic issues have changed since February, necessitating a new script.

Court takes Anderson's challenge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to tackle a political case involving 1980 presidential candidate John Anderson that could smooth the route for independents seeking the White House in 1984.

The justices announced they will hear Anderson's challenge to state election law requirements that make it difficult for third-party and other non-traditional candidates to get on the presidential ballot.

The high court next fall will review a decision upholding Ohio's rules, similar to those in other states, that compel such candidates to qualify for the November ballot months before the deadline for Democrats and Republicans to name their standard-bearers.

Anderson, a former GOP congressman from Illinois who dropped out of the Republican presidential race in 1980 to run on his own, had to file suit to force his way onto the ballot in several states. He won about 7 percent of the vote nationwide.

The Anderson case involves an Ohio law that forces an independent to file a "statement of candidacy"

What's what

Untrusting souls are we. Drop the letter in the curbside mailbox. Hear it fall. Still, we flip the flap once more. Get out of the car and lock it. Feel it click. Still, we try the door handle. Curious. Untrusting, but not always. We believe the doctor who tells us we have the dreaded Shiphart's Disease with chronic purpura, and the lawyer who advises that we're liable under Galacio's Release of Purview penalties. Nonetheless we can walk up to an elevator through half a dozen waiting citizens, see them push both buttons, up and down, yet feel the need to push the buttons, too, and do so.

Big city bums have found they can pick up a little extra walking-around money by standing in ticket lines on behalf of those willing to pay a fee for not having to do so.

Every third Italian terrorist is a woman.

TORNADO WARNING

Q. Shouldn't you open all your windows and go to the southwest corner of your house in case of a close tornado?

A. No, leave the windows closed and go to a low-level narrow central place, such as a hallway, where short beams on close supports protect the overhead, distant from exterior walls and windows. Open windows give too much leverage to the wind. The southwest corner of the house is liable to collapse inward. So say the experts now.

Q. Where are Albert Einstein's ashes?

A. Interred in a secret place known but to a few.

Q. In Las Vegas casino lingo, what's a "george"?

A. A big tipper.

NOTHING ON TV

Two pre-schoolers sometime back were trying to figure out what to do with themselves for the nonce, and one was overheard to say, "Let's color. Nothing's on TV but a couple of guys walking on the moon."

If that egg has a double yoke, odds are it was laid by an inexperienced hen so young she just didn't know any better. Mature hens rarely lay the double yokers.

Using Nadia in propaganda cost career, ex-coach says

By United Press International

NADIA'S COACH

Geza Pozsar, former Romanian gymnastics coach who choreographed Nadia Comaneci's 1976 Olympic Games gold medal performance when she was 14, says the Romanian government stunted her career by using her for propaganda purposes. Pozsar, who defected to the U.S., and now teaches gymnastics in Sacramento, Calif., was reunited with his wife and 2-year-old daughter Saturday. They were allowed to emigrate after the family had been separated for 15 months.

Pickpocket ring leader a real Fagin

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Like a page out of Charles Dickens, police say a Fagin-like character from Chicago directed a Kentucky Derby pickpocket ring with at least 18 youngsters whose parents were in debt to the ring leader.

"I was beginning to wonder if we were looking for Fagin for a while," said police Lt. William Spaulding, referring to the Dickens character who pressed poverty-striken boys into a life of crime.

Police working Saturday's Derby Day crowd arrested 35 people including 18 youngsters who apparently belonged to the pickpocket ring. Police think the ring leader escaped to Knoxville, Tenn., to begin working the World's Fair crowds.

After interviewing the juveniles arrested throughout the day Saturday, police concluded they were working for a Chicago loanshark because their parents owe him money.

Police already had taken most of the youthful suspects to a children's shelter when a pattern was spotted by the head of the Youth Center: All had bus tickets to Chicago and claimed to have one or both parents deceased.

Damage bill for pursued

TORONTO (UPI) — For Ontario police, it's no longer just the thrill of the chase.

It's also knowing the suspect probably has to pay for any damages to the police car when the smoke clears from a high-speed pursuit.

The Ontario government has won a suit forcing a man to pay for damages to a police car, even though officers deliberately slammed their cruiser into the man's car to stop him during a high-speed chase.

Julian Polika, director of the Crown's civil law office, said Monday the case was the second time the courts have held in favor of the police over accidents involving chases.

A Brant County judge ordered Paul Siery of Toronto to pay $850 for damages to a police car he led on a 75-mph chase through the streets of Brantford, Ont. Police stopped Siery by crashing into his car.

Siery also stands to lose his license for ignoring a police request to stop.

Queen Elizabeth II, shown in April visit to Philadelphia, starts career as troop transport UPI

Britain's giant luxury liner to carry troops to Falklands

LONDON (UPI) — Britain Monday requisitioned the luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 to carry reinforcements to its naval task force fighting Argentine forces in the disputed Falkland Islands.

The giant liner will carry troops from the 5th Infantry Brigade, who just completed training in Wales and are earmarked for duty in the South Atlantic, a Defense Ministry spokesman said.

A spokesman for the ship's owner, Cunard Line, said the takeover stranded 1,760 passengers booked for a Mediterranean cruise starting today.

"Of course we greatly regret the inconvenience caused to intending passengers, but the QE2's speed, size and facilities make her uniquely suited to carry a substantial number of troops who must be kept fit and ready for operations should they be required," the defense minister spokesman said.

Among the 963-foot luxury liner's keep-fit facilities are two indoor and two outdoor swimming pools, a golf driving range, trap shooting facilities, a fully equipped gymnasium with exercise machines, a sauna, turkish bath and massage room.

The ship also has a fully equipped hospital with operating theater.

Cunard officials were trying to arrange alternate tours for the stranded passengers.

"I suppose this has always been a possibility" since the Falklands crisis began, the Cunard spokesman said.

The Defense Ministry spokesman declined to say how many troops would be carried aboard the liner except that "they amount to several thousand." An infantry brigade normally has about 3,000 men.

Fervent Argentines cheer forces

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — Argentines have taken on their country's claim to the Falkland Islands with all the fervor of a World Cup soccer match.

Crowds gather daily at the Plaza de Mayo facing the government palace to cheer their side to victory in the dispute with Britain.

Like soccer, another national passion, demonstrations in front of the Casa Rosada are an Argentine tradition. But unlike more partisan causes, the struggle to hold on to the Falklands, which they call the Malvinas, has usually filled the plaza with boisterous cheers of encouragement.

When the Argentines believe their troops have scored a victory — as the May Day resistance to the British bombing raids was interpreted — the chants and slogans are colorful and upbeat.

But when a British "goal" is impossible to deny — such as the recapture of South Georgia Island — the fans sometimes turn nasty.

"The Malvinas are with Argentina, the people with Peron," goes one chant in reference to the outlawed labor movement organized by the late President Juan Domingo Peron.

But most cheers are reminiscent of the morale-boosting cries more common to the sports field.

"British, bring on the fleet, we'll pound it to mincemeat," was the going slogan when Britain bombed the Falklands.

"We have hot oil," went another, referring to the 1807 battle of Buenos Aires when Argentine civilians attacked the British occupying forces by pouring hot oil from rooftops.

One popular chant is a direct import from the soccer field. "Give it to them Boca," the fight cry of the Boca Juniors soccer club, is a special crowd rouser.

Cuba holds military aid

PARIS (UPI) — Cuban Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez said Monday his country supports Argentina's claim over the Falkland Islands but will not aid the military junta without support from other Latin American nations.

"Cuba recognizes Argentina's sovereignty over the islands and supports the Argentine people in its desire to regain control of the islands," Rodriguez said. "This does not mean a backing for the junta."

Rodriguez, on a three-day state visit, spoke to reporters after talks with French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson.

"My country is determined to help Argentina within the framework of Latin American countries," he said.

"It is these countries which will determine the type of aid" to be provided for Buenos Aires.

USSR uses satellites to monitor situation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has launched at least eight satellites in orbits over the South Atlantic since March 31 — just before the Argentine invasion of the Falkland Islands — to monitor military movements in the area, U.S. intelligence sources said Monday.

The United States has at least one satellite watching the same region and has passed some information received from it to the British, the sources said.

The sources stressed that not all of the eight Soviet satellites launched between March 31 and April 28 still were in orbit.

The intelligence-gathering satellites cannot sustain their low orbits for more than two weeks and must be replaced, they said. Other sources said the satellites may not stay in orbit for more than "a few days."

The Soviet Union tends to launch spy satellites on an as-needed basis for the short-term whereas a U.S. satellite is designed to stay in orbit for months or even years and can be turned to look at other areas, the sources said.

"The Soviets operate on a system of 'Let's get something up there and take a look,'" said one source familiar with satellite operations.

The Soviets launched three different types of intelligence-gathering satellites: photo reconnaissance and devices to intercept communications and radar, the sources said.

Loyalty clear

LONDON (UPI) — The groom who takes care of Prince Charles' eight polo ponies, wears a badge reading: "I am a British subject" — clearly displaying his loyalty lies with Britain, not his native Argentina.

Except for the badge, Raol Correa refuses to comment on the Falklands crisis.

15 Britons return home from island

CAMBRIDGE, England (UPI) — Thirteen British scientists and two film makers who eluded Argentine capture on the Falkland Island dependency of South Georgia are heading home, a member of the British Antarctic Survey said Monday.

"We heard from the Ministry of Defense that they had been taken off South Georgia and are now on a ship off the north coast of the island and on their way home," said Dr. Ray Adie, deputy director of scientific survey.

The group spent the last few weeks camped out in four separate field huts in the interior of the island, 800 miles east of the Falklands.

"All are fit and well but we don't know how they're coming home or when they'll arrive," Adie said. "We haven't been told the name of the ship or what kind of ship (they're on)."

Previously, 13 other survey scientists who were captured in the April 3 Argentine seizure of South Georgia were deported and returned to Britain.

Adie said the remaining scientists and the two film makers, Cindy Buxton and Annie Prime, encountered no problems with Argentine troops before Britain captured the island April 25.

The scientists were studying marine life and meteorology. The women were making a nature film.

More than 50 Burley residents approach City Hall to protest WPPSS termination costs at Monday night's council meeting

City workers to seek $125 more a month

Will also seek more vacation

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Full-time municipal employees in Twin Falls are seeking a $125-a-month pay raise and more vacation time.

Employees informally have agreed that they want an across-the-board raise instead of a percentage increase, Kent McDowell, a spokesmen for the Twin Falls City Employee Committee, told City Council on Monday.

Overall, the additional $125 a month would result in an average pay increase of slightly less than 8 percent, said McDowell, a Twin Falls policeman.

Last year, city employees got a 9 percent raise. The employees believe an appeal for another 9 percent increase is unrealistic, according to McDowell, who said the across-the-board plan was chosen because of its significant benefit for lower-paid workers. For some of those workers, an additional $125 a month would amount to a 12 percent increase, he said.

City Manager Tom Courtney said that preliminary budget figures indicate the city can afford a 5 percent to 7 percent increase this year. Raises are determined during council's budget deliberations in the summer.

The employee committee made its pay proposal on behalf of all city workers, with the exception of firefighters, who belong to a union. The city has 186 full-time employees, about 30 of them firemen.

Responding to questions from council members, McDowell said his committee has no figures showing exactly how many employees favor a flat raise over a percentage increase, but such a count could be made. He said committee members, representing various departments, discussed the proposal with their co-workers and encountered virtually no opposition.

In addition to the raise, the employees want more vacation time for workers with five or more years of service. Presently, all city employees receive one day of vacation time per month, regardless of how long they have worked for the city.

The proposal calls for an additional hour per month for persons with five years of service, two hours after 10 years, three hours after 15 years and four hours per month after 20 years.

The committee also requests that there be no reduction in the size of the city's work force. However, McDowell said a survey conducted a few years ago revealed that if the city had to impose layoffs to obtain money for raises, city workers would prefer layoffs to foregoing the additional money.

Mothball flak

Burley council urged to fight bill for abandoned nuclear plants

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Several residents questioned Burley City Council on Monday night about the city's involvement in two defunct nuclear-power projects.

However, council had few answers. Council members and they, themselves, do not have all the answers yet to the complex problem.

More than 50 persons filled council chambers for the meeting. Many persons demanded that council vote to refuse any payment for the termination costs of the two plants recently "mothballed" by the Washington Public Power Supply System.

But Mayor Chuck Shadduck told the group that council could make no immediate decision because it was as much in the dark as the residents about the legal ramifications of WPPSS.

The city of Burley was one of 88 utilities that signed up several years ago to own a share of the two nuclear-power projects.

Last fall, the two projects were canceled by the WPPSS board of directors when cost overruns made financing difficult to obtain.

"I suspect the ultimate answer is not yet known by any person in the entire Northwest," said Burley's attorney, Bill Parsons.

"We are in Idaho own very little of WPPSS," Shadduck said. The city is "riding the shirttails" of larger participating cities and utility cooperatives that own shares in WPPSS, he said.

And Burley does not have the time, expertise or money to thoroughly investigate the legal aspects of the WPPSS terminations, Shadduck said.

Many Americans bought bonds and invested their money in the nuclear projects, the mayor said. "I think in good faith someway, somehow, we should honor those bonds to those people."

The city went into the program with its "eyes wide open," he said, and "we're all facing a bad scene."

Several residents testified that they are on fixed incomes and could not afford the rate increases that would be necessitated by the shared costs of the termination.

A recent study by a Washington consulting firm, R.W. Beck of Seattle, indicated that Burley electrical customers probably would pay about $6 a month more for the next 30 years to pay off their share of closing down the two plants.

"When are you going to take a stand with us in this?" asked Madge Vallejo.

"If we can't get an answer, my own feeling is that I'm not going to pay it," Robert Watrous said.

A petition bearing the signatures of 847 persons was presented to council by Lois Hines. The petition read, simply: "We, the undersigned, request you to hang tough and refuse payment to WPPSS."

After the meeting, Vallejo said she was unhappy with council's refusal to vote to refuse payments to WPPSS. And committee member Connie Williams called the city fathers "chicken" and accused them of sitting on the fence because they took no stand.

Harmon Park beverage bottle ban wins OK

TWIN FALLS — If you're a law-abiding sort who occasionally likes to sip a beer in the city parks, you'd best buy your beverage in cans.

Monday night, Twin Falls City Council voted to ban glass beverage containers in the parks.

The decision came at the urging of the city's Parks and Recreation Commission, two residents of the Harmon Park area and a city employee who coordinates softball programs. They said broken glass is hazardous and controlling it could be easier if police officers had a bottle ban to use as leverage.

"Every week that I work, I have little kids come in with bloody feet," said Karen Waldron, the softball coordinator.

Originally, council considered an ordinance that would have banned all glass containers, whether they be wine bottles or pickle jars. But that could have involved problems for picnickers, so council reworded the ordinance to make it more specific.

Enforcement will be light at best, according to City Manager Tom Courtney, who said the Police Department has only four patrolmen on duty at any given time, but the public steadily is increasing the number of calls made for assistance.

McClure endorses power bill tax exemption idea

By RON ZELLAR
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Sen. Jim McClure says he likes a Rupert attorney's suggestion about how to recover at least a portion of the debt for two defunct nuclear-power plants.

Don Chisholm, the attorney for the city of Rupert, has proposed allowing electricity consumers to deduct — for tax purposes — that portion of their utility bills attributable to the debt for Washington Public Power Supply System plants Nos. 4 and 5.

The WPPSS board of directors decided last year to terminate the two projects because power demands in the region have been lower than predicted.

However, Rupert utility customers face rate hikes of around $20 a month for the next 30 years just to pay their share of the $2.25 billion already spent on the plants, according to a recent study by a Washington consulting firm, R.W. Beck of Seattle.

McClure had said previously that Congress probably would not be inclined to bail out the 88 utilities that participated in the projects because no federal money was invested and because Northwesterners pay less for their power than in other parts of the country.

But an aide to the senator said Monday that McClure's office is drafting a letter to the Internal Revenue Service, asking if the deduction could be claimed under existing laws.

If not, McClure intends to pursue whatever legislation might be necessary, according to Tod Neuenschwander, McClure's press secretary.

"We were surprised no one thought of that earlier," Neuenschwander said of the idea.

Under Chisholm's proposal, co-ops and other public power districts that bought shares in the WPPSS projects would determine how much of their customers' power bills are a direct result of the two terminated projects.

"Businesses that incur losses already can claim such deductions," Chisholm said.

The deduction would allow taxpayers who itemize deductions to recover between 20 percent and 50 percent of the WPPSS debt included in their utility bills.

Neuenschwander cautioned, however, that the tax remedy presumes that utility districts will pay their portion of the project debt. Some now are threatening to withhold payment.

Rupert City Council has declined to prepay a portion of its debt to facilitate the closing of the two projects, and it has been researching the validity of the contracts between the utilities and WPPSS.

Mayor Bill Whittom said last week the city still hasn't sorted out all of its legal options.

He said the tax-deduction option would apply only to the amount for which utilities ultimately are found responsible. How much that amount will be is likely to be decided in court, Whittom said.

A federal auditing team also has been looking at the Bonneville Power Administration's role in fostering the two plants. Any BPA payment would spread the cost among a larger number of the region's residents.

Chisholm said the concept of an individual tax deduction occurred to him on a return flight from Seattle, where he and Whittom had met for two days with utility representatives to discuss legal issues in the WPPSS case.

Tax benefits would not apply to three other WPPSS plants contracted to the BPA. The BPA, which controls the distribution of power throughout a large portion of the Pacific Northwest, is seeking a 73 percent wholesale power rate increase this fall, in part to pay for cost overruns on the three other WPPSS plants, one of which also may be delayed or terminated.

Rural 'enclaves' in city will get fire protection

TWIN FALLS — Unannexed "islands" of property that are surrounded by land within Twin Falls now qualify for city fire protection.

Protection for such property won City Council approval Monday after Roy Raymond requested that he be allowed to buy city fire-protection service for his car dealership off Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

In reaching their decision, council members cited questions of jurisdiction and the possibility of fires spreading from unannexed property to city property.

But they said outlying property that does not constitute an island cannot qualify for city service.

City Manager Tom Courtney said problems that could arise if the Fire Department held out-of-town contracts include questions of liability and the diversion of fire-fighting equipment away from the city. Furthermore, he said, rural areas usually don't have standard address systems, and the cost of serving outlying areas would be prohibitive.

Based on projected tax-equivalency fees, Courtney said 1,000 contracts for rural service would not generate enough money to cover the cost of a new engine company.

City asks right to potentially dump extra sewage in river

By SUSAN GALLAGHER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls and Idaho Frozen Foods want to increase temporarily the quantity of sewer-plant waste entering the Snake River.

City Council members said Monday that they will ask the state to relax the permit that governs how much waste water empties into the river from the municipal sewage plant. The decision came at the request of IFF.

A variance would allow the city to dump a specified amount of partially treated waste water into the river, according to Al Murrey, the water quality director for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

The increased discharge level is necessary because of a projected increase in Idaho Frozen Foods' production and uncertainty about the reconstructed sewer plant's ability to adequately treat the additional volume of IFF's potato-processing waste.

Considerations in weighing the variance request include IFF's impact on the Twin Falls economy, Mayor Chris Talkington said. He said council members received confidential, written information about IFF, which is Twin Falls' largest employer, and they had a chance to study it before Monday's council meeting. City officials said making the information public could affect IFF's standing with its competitors.

"This is too much of a political football for us to get into a situation where someone could accuse us, or have the basis to accuse us, of handling confidential information in a careless manner," Talkington said.

Idaho Department of Health and Welfare officials, the city manager, the mayor and the city's engineer recently met in Boise to discuss the proposed variance, which could come before the DHW board in June. Among other things, obtaining a variance requires proof that the increased discharge will not damage the Snake River irreparably.

However, City Manager Tom Courtney said the variance may not be necessary, depending on whether the city's sewage plant, presently undergoing a $6 million reconstruction project, can function beyond its design specifications. But that won't be known until after the plant goes on line in mid-summer.

The original plant's inability to treat the city's industrial, commercial and residential wastes in compliance with federal environmental-protection standards necessitated the reconstruction, which came on the heels of the Environmental Protection Agency threatening to levy $10,000-a-day fines against the city. And city officials say the specter of such fines is prompting them to exercise extreme caution in possibly accommodating IFF's increased discharge.

Because it will be several months before the new sewer plant's capabilities can be monitored, the city is seeking a discharge variance in advance to avoid the possibility of interrupting IFF's production, Courtney said.

"Idaho Frozen Foods is an important part of the community, and because it is here, a lot of dollars turn over in Twin Falls," he said. "Limiting production puts the company in a poor position with its customers, and it also means fewer jobs in the community."

IFF, which is the largest single user of the municipal plant, intends to build its own treatment system and be off the city's system by next January. The move is necessary because the municipal plant can't handle IFF's projected waste loads, and because city service costs more than double the anticipated operating cost of a company-run system, IFF's manager, Lee Odenwald, has said on several occasions.

Triggering the variance request is IFF's desire to increase production to the extent that the company's daily biochemical-oxygen demand at the city's sewer plant would rise from 25,000 pounds to 30,000 pounds. BOD represents the dissolved oxygen necessary for decomposition of organic matter in water.

When calculated in accordance with a formula that allows for production peaks at IFF, the extra 5,000 pounds of BOD exceeds the city plant's design specifications, Courtney said. The new plant is designed to handle a daily total of 35,400 pounds of BOD from industrial, commercial and residential sources, according to the city manager.

The Times-News was unable to reach Odenwald late last week or Monday for comments about the company's plans.

King Hill wreck survivors on stable list

KING HILL — Two Glenns Ferry teenagers, injured in a Saturday morning accident that claimed the life of William Archie Hitesman, 16, are listed in stable condition at Elmore County Memorial Hospital in Mountain Home.

Elmore County sheriff's officers said Hitesman, of Glenns Ferry, was a passenger in a car driven by Scott Ulinski, 16.

Ulinski and another passenger, Ron Nelson, 18, were in stable condition Monday. Treated and released following the accident were Bill Perry, 17, and Brian Leake, 16, both of Glenns Ferry.

Larry Olson, the chief deputy, said the one-car accident occurred on a back county road about three-quarters of a mile west of King Hill, when the vehicle rolled down an embankment.

Details of the accident still are under investigation, and Olson could not say Monday what caused the vehicle to leave the road, which he said has a number of curves.

Hitesman originally was treated at the Mountain Home hospital and then transferred to a Boise hospital, where he died a few hours later.

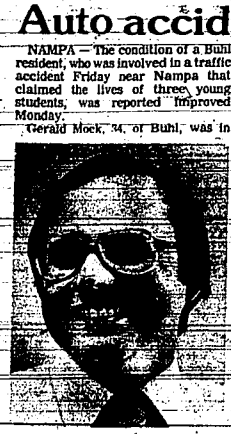

A full obituary appears elsewhere on this page.

Auto accident victim improves

NAMPA — The condition of a Buhl resident, who was involved in a traffic accident Friday near Nampa that claimed the lives of three young students, was reported improved Monday.

Gerald Mock, 34, of Buhl, was in satisfactory condition at Mercy Medical Center. His pickup truck was struck by a station wagon in which four teenagers, all students at Gem State Academy in Caldwell, were traveling. Three of the teenagers died, and the fourth, Flo Gregory, 16, of Rupert, was hospitalized in Nampa.

Officials at Mercy Medical Center said the young woman was no longer in their hospital Monday, but they refused to give any further information.

Hospital names Arizona man as new controller

TWIN FALLS — A controller of a 213-bed Tucson, Ariz., hospital has been named controller of Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Jeff Taylor, 35, the former controller of Kino Community Hospital, will replace Scott Richardson, who has been promoted to a regional controller position with the Hospital Corporation of America.

Taylor, a native of Fremont, Neb., worked 18 months at the Tucson hospital. Previously, he had worked nine years as an accounts manager at Bishop Clarkson Memorial Hospital, a 600-bed facility in Omaha, Neb.

Taylor and his wife, Barbara, have a 13-year-old son. He will assume his duties at MVMH this month.

Richardson had worked at the hospital for two years and was responsible for the financial feasibility study of the hospital's construction program.

As a district controller, Richardson will oversee the financial operations of several HCA-owned or managed hospitals in the Midwest.

Pre-kindergarten health screening offered in Filer

FILER — A pre-kindergarten screening for children in the Filer School District will be held this Wednesday and Thursday.

Participation in the screening, which will be held at Filer Elementary School, is optional but encouraged, according to Principal Dave Teater. Teater said the screening includes evaluation of motor and language skills, and hearing and vision tests. Participation is open to children who will be 5 on or before Oct. 15.

Screenings will be held from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1 to 3 p.m. on both days. Parents should call the school at 326-4396 to make appointments.

Parents also should bring their children's birth certificates and immunization records, Teater said.

On May 15, South Central Health District personnel will administer immunizations at the school.

$2,500 burglary of tools reported

TWIN FALLS — An estimated $2,500 worth of tools were reported missing from a Twin Falls business Monday, following a weekend burglary.

Twin Falls police said someone burglarized a warehouse at Haney Seed Co., 347 S. Park Ave., between 10:30 p.m. Sunday and 6 a.m. Monday.

Among the items missing were hand tools, power tools and shop items.

In a second theft under investigation, a burglar removed $325 worth of items from a Twin Falls residence between 4 p.m. and midnight Thursday. Police did not receive the report until Monday.

Police said H.A. Paynter reported that someone forcibly entered his residence, 178 Maurice St., and removed a camera and jewelry. The break-in also caused an estimated $50 damage to the residence, officers said.

Correction

KIMBERLY — Dr. J. Hamilton Smith, the chairman of the Kimberly school board, said Monday that he will not seek re-election to another term on the board. The Time-News had reported Sunday that Smith had filed a petition to run in the school board election, which will be held Tuesday, May 18.

Three candidates — Larry Wright, G. Kent Taylor and R. Robert Stark, have filed for Smith's Zone 2 position.

County drops rape charge

TWIN FALLS — Prosecutors have dropped a statutory rape charge against a former employee of the Idaho State School for the Deaf and Blind, citing problems with evidence in the case.

The defendant, 32-year-old David Brown of Gooding, was charged with having sexual relations with one of the school's students, a 16-year-old girl.

Brown's preliminary hearing was scheduled for Monday.

But Friday, Harry DeHaan, the Twin Falls County prosecutor, dismissed the charge. The prosecutor said the alleged victim did not want to testify.

DeHaan said he has ruled out subpoenaing the woman into court, but he has reserved the right to refile the charge.

Motorcycle mashed after argument

TWIN FALLS — Police, answering a call about a disturbance at 365 Caswell Ave. W. in Twin Falls early Saturday morning, found a mashed motorcycle under a pickup truck — and an unhappy motorcycle owner.

Louis Garbrecht, 336 Sixth Ave. N., told Twin Falls police that Gaylan Carson, 30, 1937 Fourth Ave. E., Twin Falls, became angry, for undisclosed reasons, and drove his truck over the top of Garbrecht's 1979 motorcycle, which was parked in the yard at the Caswell Avenue address. Garbrecht placed Carson under citizen's arrest and called police.

Garbrecht estimated the damage to his motorcycle $1,500.

Carson has been charged with destruction of property, and he was released from the county jail Saturday night on $300 bond.

Man charged, again, with beer theft

TWIN FALLS — A Buhl man, who was acquitted Friday of stealing beer from a convience store, faced a new round of similar charges Monday.

A complaint filed in Fifth District Magistrate Court alleges that 25-year-old Kim Lyle Hudsen took four 16-ounce cans of beer Saturday from Sliger's Grill and Games, west of Buhl of [illegible].

Hudsen has been charged with petty theft, a misdemeanor, and released on his own recognizance. An arraignment has been set for May 11.

The defendant was aquitted last week of a similar charge, stemming from the alleged theft March 9 of a bottle of beer from Larry's Quick Service, 650 Broadway S., Buhl.

Lloyd J. Brown

KETCHUM — Lloyd J. Brown, 84, of Ketchum, died Sunday at Blaine County Hospital in Hailey, following a long illness.

Born Dec. 3, 1893, in Spring Creek south of Bellevue, his parents were members of two of the oldest pioneer families, the Browns and the Calhouns, who came to the Wood River Valley in 1881.

He attended Hailey schools through the eighth grade and then entered Campion College Preparatory School at Prairie Du Chien, Wisc. He graduated in 1916, following his service with the U.S. Army in Europe during World War I. Following the war he entered the University of Wisconsin Law school to prepare for a career in business administration.

He was first employed in the railway supply business and then by the American Tobacco Co. He later was a partner in the Point Arena Wholesale Fish Co. He retired following a heart attack and later operated his own commercial fishing boat.

He married Isabel Hawkins on Nov. 6, 1960, in Virginia City, Nev. He and his wife returned to the Wood River Valley 11 years ago from Little River, Calif.

He was a member of Our Lady of the Snow Catholic Church in Ketchum. He was an ardent fisherman and hunter all of his life.

Surviving are: his wife of Ketchum; a son, Brooks Michael Brown of Forest Hill, Conn.; a sister, Lela Brown Fagan of Ketchum; and three grandchildren.

Rosary will be recited at 7:30 p.m. this evening at Our Lady of the Snow Catholic Church. Mass will be celebrated at the church at 11 a.m. Wednesday with Father Joseph M. Gebhardt as celebrant. Burial will be in the Bellevue Cemetery. Arrangements are under the direction of Wood River Chapel in Hailey.

William A. Hitesman

GLENNS FERRY — William Archie Hitesman, 16, of Glenns Ferry, died Saturday at a Boise hospital, of injuries sustained in an automobile accident early Saturday near King Hill.

Born Oct. 26, 1965, in Mountain Home, he was reared and educated in Glenns Ferry. He was a sophomore at Glenns Ferry High School, a member of the Prep Club and track team, and a member of Our Lady of Limerick Catholic Church of Glenns Ferry.

Surviving are: his mother, Donna Hitesman of Glenns Ferry; his father, William "Bill" Hitesman of Lakeside, Ore.; two brothers, Jerry and Joe of Glenns Ferry; and his maternal grandmother, Millie Pellant of Hamilton, Mont.

The service will be held today at 10 a.m. in Our Lady of Limerick Catholic Church with Father P.B. Condon officiating. Burial will be in the Glenns Ferry Cemetery.

Elizabeth J. Colter

GOODING — Elizabeth Jane Colter, 88, of Gooding, died Sunday evening at Gooding Memorial Hospital.

She was born Aug. 10, 1892, in Howell County, Mo., where she was reared and educated. She married Birdie Esco Colter on Dec. 22, 1909, in Mountain View, Mo. They came to Gooding in 1926 and operated a farm northwest of there until retiring in 1956, when they moved to town.

She was a member of the Gooding Christian Church.

Surviving are: two sons, Harold L. Colter of Gooding and Junior Colter of San Jose, Calif.; a daughter, Irene Lenker of Gooding; two sisters, Grace Key of Chandler, Okla., and Maude Hayes of Gooding; 9 grandchildren; 23 great-grandchildren; 10 great-great grandchildren; and one great-great-great-grandchild. She was preceded in death by her husband in 1974, a daughter, Faynina Bay, in 1942, and four brothers.

The service will be conducted Wednesday at 2 p.m. at Demaray's Thompson Chapel in Gooding with Rev. Harold Hake of the Gooding Christian Church officiating. Burial will be in the Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding. Friends may call at the funeral chapel today from 1 to 8 p.m.

Wanda Jewell Murphy

GLENNS FERRY — Wanda Jewell Murphy, 68, of Glenns Ferry, died Saturday at a Mountain Home hospital.

Born March 1, 1914, in Mountain Home, where she was reared and educated, she attended nursing school and had been a nurse in several hospitals in the Pacific Northwest.

Surviving are: two brothers, Ted and Urban Murphy and a sister, Vickie Kinnersley, all of Glenns Ferry.

A graveside service will be held at 2 p.m. today at the Glenns Rest Cemetery with Rev. Stuart Olbrich of the First Congregational Church of Mountain Home officiating.

Dessie M. Morgan

DECLO — Dessie Mae Morgan, 91, of Declo, died Sunday at Cassia Memorial Hospital of a short illness.

Born April 1, 1891, at Oakdale, Wash., she lived in northern Idaho most of her early years. She married Wilford Charles Morgan on Jan. 1, 1914, in Glenns Ferry. They resided on the Henry Payne farm south of Paul for two years, then moved to Declo in 1917 where they pioneered a farm. She lived there the rest of her life except for three years when she lived north of Paul.

Surviving are: six sons, Clinton Morgan of Silverton, Ore., Mike and Dallas Morgan, both of Boise, John Morgan of Kimberly, Ray Morgan of Medford, Ore., and Cecil Morgan of Shoshone; two daughters, Cleoe Gee of Oakley and Jean Carvey of Long View, Wash.; 33 grandchildren; 77 great-grandchildren; and two great-great grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her husband, a daughter, three grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

The service will be held at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Declo Stake Center with Bishop Preston Allen officiating. Burial will be in the Declo Cemetery. Friends may call at McCulloch's today from 2 until 8:30 p.m. and one hour prior to the service at the church.

Evans OKs $10,000 for Carey flood repair

BOISE (UPI) — Gov. John Evans said Monday he will allocate $10,000 of his emergency fund to repair some of the damage caused by severe flooding in the Carey area late last month.

Spring run-off swamped two small earthen dams April 25 on the Little Fish Creek, a tributary of the Little Wood River, sending flood waters into the town and the surrounding agricultural area.

Evans approved the emergency allocation following discussions with officials of the Little Wood River Flood Control District and the Little Wood Canal Co., and state Sen. John Peavey, whose district includes Carey.

Also Monday, the governor asked the Idaho Water Resources Board to call an emergency meeting to consider a loan to the canal company. The firm's irrigation system was damaged severely by the flood, officials said.

In a letter to Reed Hansen, the chairman of the Water Resources Board, Evans notified board members of his emergency allocation and urged them to meet soon to loan funds to the company. He did not specify an amount.

"Because of the large number of farms depending on Little Wood Canal for irrigation, it is critical that we get the system back into operation before the onset of the irrigation season," the governor said.

About 150 farmers rely on the canal to irrigate some 11,000 acres, according to officials.

In addition to the damage to the irrigation system, the flood caused extensive damage to farms, homes and livestock. Last week, officials estimated the overall damage at $1.8 million.

Owners of farms and ranchers that suffered damage in the flooding are eligible for federal disaster assistance loans under the state of emergency Evans declared last week.

CSI offers several summer classes

TWIN FALLS — Nine summer classes are being offered by the College of Southern Idaho Continuing Education Department.

All the classes start in June, with the exception of beginning tennis, which starts in July.

The offerings include: cheese-making, dog obedience, jazz dance, pottery, prospecting for placer gold, therapeutic and athletic massage, tennis and the world of computers.

An adult recreation and conditioning program will be held during the mornings at the CSI gymnasium, under the direction of Bob Wright.

The number of students in some of the classes is limited, so anyone interested should enroll soon.

Convicts conflict at Sirhan hearings

By ROBERT CRABBE
United Press International

SOLEDAD, Calif. — A former student therapist at Soledad Prison insisted Monday he saw Sirhan Sirhan re-enact the assassination of Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Bruce Nelson, 43, of Malibu, Calif., testified at the sixth day of a hearing by a three-member panel on whether to revoke the 1964 parole date of Kennedy's assassin.

Nelson repeatedly insisted he saw Sirhan re-enact the 1968 murder despite earlier testimony that Nelson flunked a lie detector test in October when he made the same statement to parole investigators.

Nelson, a former intern counselor who lost his job at the prison in 1977 for allegedly trying to smuggle a camera into Sirhan's cell-block, became a close friend of former Soledad inmate Carmen Falzone, who later furnished Playboy Magazine with material for an article on Sirhan.

Nelson said Falzone was good at getting people to talk about themselves. He said one day when he, Falzone and Sirhan were alone, Falzone got Sirhan to reenact the crime.

"It's something you don't forget very easily," Nelson said.

Sirhan has repeatedly claimed he had no memory of carrying out Kennedy's shooting.

Asked about results of the lie detector test that said he was "not truthful on some questions," Nelson said, "I can't help the results of the polygraph. My answers are truthful."

Nelson said the 1977 Playboy article was substantially correct. The article said Sirhan allegedly planned to steal nuclear weapons secrets upon his release for an Arab nation.

Nelson said he telephoned Playboy to get the magazine interested in the article, then he and Falzone met with a Playboy reporter in Monterey to discuss the story. This occurred after Falzone's parole several years ago.

Board of Prison Terms investigators read a statement they received by telephone from Falzone in which Falzone said Nelson was never present when he talked with Sirhan. Nelson said he was present for six conversations involving Sirhan.

Falzone, a convicted burglar and confidence man who was paroled several years ago, is being sought by authorities on a theft charge.

Earlier Monday, Sirhan's lawyer sought to discredit an inmate testifying against Sirhan by disclosing the inmate wrote letters to pornographic magazines.

The topic of lawyer Luke McKissack's pre-hearing news conference was inmate John Zenc, who told investigators he was offended when he once saw Sirhan scrawling an obscenity during a school class at the prison.

McKissack waved two copies of an X-rated magazine, "His and Hers," and an issue of a tabloid, "Impulse," and said they contained letters narrating the sex life of convict Zenc, convicted killer of a 15-year-old girl.

McKissack said Zenc told of seeing Sirhan sitting in a school class at the state prison at Soledad writing obscene remarks on scratch paper and plastic cups.

McKissack said Zenc's own writings "are not consistent with Zenc's allegation that he would be offended by Sirhan" writing obscene words on a paper cup."

Zenc was expected to testify on Thursday that he heard Sirhan saying he would "get" Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Drug bust stumbles into betting ring

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Vice officers who worked for three months to break up an illegal narcotics operation stumbled onto a betting ring as well, police announced Monday.

A spokesman said an undercover officer purchased about $600 in pills at an apartment house, then sat down to wait while one of the suspects went to get the merchandise.

While he waited, the officer noticed some betting forms and was offered the chance to make a bet. He put down $20, and before the suspect returned his horse came in a winner.

The officer collected his $134, picked up the pills and disclosed his true identity.

Essie Gilkey, 64, and Walsworth Hayes, 61, were arrested on narcotics and bookmaking charges. The officer said he was "tempted" to keep his gambling winnings but turned in the money as evidence.

Voter prizes

Sweepstakes newest trick to draw votes

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A Hollywood producer is offering thousands of prizes ranging from a bag of french fries to a trip to Hawaii to lure Californians to the polling booths for the June primary.

Edward Shaw, a consultant to a Democratic candidate for governor, says he hopes the bipartisan $5 million sweepstakes will make the June 8 balloting a "fun election" and increase the number of voters.

"The voter turnout at primaries is rotten," Shaw said Monday. "I think this is going to beef up the turnout by at least 50 percent."

To enter the contest, a voter must send in the identification stub given after a ballot is cast.

"On June 21 several dozen people with long arms will draw the first winners out," said Shaw, whose movie credits include "Give 'em Hell Harry," "Hollywood Night" and "Blood and Guns."

"The first 10 prizes are tickets for any destination on Western Airlines circuits — Hawaii, Alaska, Canada. The person who picks Hawaii gets to have dinner with James MacArthur from 'Hawaii 5-O.'"

Up to 150,000 prizes will be distributed, including $100,000 worth of french fries from McDonald's and memberships at Family Fitness Centers across the state, Shaw said.

The contest started as a "publicity stunt" for Mario Obledo, a former state director of health services who trails far behind Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley in the race for the Democratic nomination to succeed Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.

But Shaw thinks the voting sweepstakes will become an American tradition.

"It's for a good cause, to keep America strong," said Shaw, a former Hollywood publicity agent.

"In El Salvador they fire guns to try to keep people from voting, here we have to give people an incentive to vote."

Although there is no connection between who a voter supports and who wins the prizes, Shaw said he thinks the contest will help his candidate.

"A lot of people who would vote for Mario don't vote for sundry reasons," he said. "If a Mexican-American thinks he can win a shot at a trip to Acapulco he might get out and vote.

"If Mario Obledo gets a few extra votes, good. But everyone is going to win on election day.

"The sweepstakes will make it a fun election. Because it's a wild idea, twice as many people will vote."

Seismic rules spark complaints

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (UPI) — Seismic and oil companies are loudly protesting proposed U.S. Forest Service rules restricting seismic exploration in non-wilderness areas of the Lewis and Clark National Forest.

Company representatives say the restrictions, combined with the vagaries of the weather, could result in mass rushes into the foothills of the Rocky Mountains to conduct testing. That rush by seismic crews could cause as much uproar among forest users as a more leisurely approach to the exploration work, the firms contend.

The proposed rules, which are open to public comment through May 24th, would severely restrict seismic exploration to reduce disturbance of wildlife and recreationalists.

They include seasonal closures in spring grizzly habitat, elk calving habitat and big game winter range; closures during hunting season in the areas most heavily used by hunters and restrictions in other heavily-used areas; a minimum nine-mile spacing between active seismic lines; and confinement of helicopter flights to corridors parallel to the seismic lines.

In the past, each request for seismic exploration has been considered individually. However, since permit filings have increased and each exploration has a great deal in common with others, the forest decided to prepare an environment assessment.

The assessment will apply to non-wilderness lands along the eastern slopes of the Rockies and in the Little Belt, Castle, Highwood, Crazy and Snowy mountains.

Areas included in the Montana Wilderness Study Act or areas recommended for further planning or wilderness during RARE II will not be considered in the assessment. Requests for seismic exploration in these areas will continue to be handled case-by-case.

Valley life

Dear Abby

Her lifestyle catches her

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
United Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a young woman who recently became friendly with another young woman who is a flight attendant with an airline. She is a very together gal with a warm and winning personality — friendly, charming, vivacious. She has it all.

She asked me over last Saturday so we could have lunch and take in a movie. When I got to her apartment, she was making the last of 14 telephone calls — mostly to married men.

She told me that she had just discovered that she had contracted a venereal disease, and she was calling every man she had been with for the last three or four months so he could be examined immediately and not risk infecting his wife or any other woman.

I admired her concern and sense of "honor," if you can call it that, but I must admit that I was badly shaken.

Why am I writing this? To ask you to please warn every sexually active man, woman, girl and boy that no matter how "clean" a person looks, it's foolish to take a chance with a stranger.

This girl looks like the most immaculate, ladylike, discriminating, cautious person you would ever want to see. Please, Abby, print this. All it takes is one wrong guess.

— SHOOK

DEAR SHOOK: I'm printing your letter. A word to the wise is sufficient. And it may even help the foolish.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 18, and my high-school graduation is coming up soon. I want my father to attend, but I don't want Linda. She's his second wife. I'm afraid if I don't invite Linda, Dad won't come.

He left Mom eight years ago to marry this no-good barfly. Mom makes us kids visit Dad on weekends. We hate going there because Linda is so hateful toward us when Dad is not around.

Mom never remarried. She says she's waiting until she has us five kids raised, but we think she's still in love with Dad. She's so much nicer than Linda. We don't know what he saw in her. We'd like to get Mom and Dad back together again. I think he still cares, but he's too bullheaded to admit that he made a mistake.

How can I get Dad to attend my graduation without his wife?

— WANTS DAD

DEAR WANTS: If your Dad is aware of your dislike for Linda, ask him to attend your graduation alone. (He may surprise you and accept.) If he's not aware, then the invitation should be sent to Mr. and Mrs., and it's up to Linda to accept or decline.

About getting your Mom and Dad together again: If your father "made a mistake but is too bullheaded to admit it," he will have to live with the consequences.

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to comment on the letter from "Going Crazy," whose 7-year-old son still sucks his thumb.

I'm 27, and I still suck my thumb. My teeth are perfect and I've never had braces.

I have never felt the need to suck my thumb during the daytime. I am a sheriff's deputy and I'm very well adjusted. I find sucking my thumb at bedtime very comforting. It helps me to relax. You can lose a teddy bear, but you can't lose a thumb. Sign me ...

- walnut paste
- eggnog frosting

Resift flour with baking powder and salt. Cream butter with sugar then beat in eggs one at a time. Blend in flour mixture alternately with milk. Stir in brandy, walnuts and mixed fruit.

Stir cherries into 2⅔ cup batter; turn into greased and floured 8-inch layer pan.

Stir in molasses, spices, and prunes into remaining batter, turn into second pan.

Bake at 300° F. for about 65 minutes. Cool 15 minutes and turn out onto wire rack to completely cool.

Put layers together with walnut paste. (Grate or blend fine 1 cup walnuts and ¼ cup sifted powdered sugar, 3 tablespoons of unbeaten egg whites and a dash of salt. Mix all together and put between fruit cake layers.

Eggnog Frosting: Mix together 2 tablespoons soft butter, 1 egg yolk, ½ teaspoon vanilla, 1½ cup sifted powdered sugar and milk or cream to make a frosting that is spreadable.

She was pregnant too soon

By ELISE T. CHISOLM
Baltimore Evening Sun

You know what makes me boil? The fact that the latest big boom in America is the Baby Boom, and I am too old to participate anymore. I boomed too soon.

I mean, right there on the cover of Time magazine recently was the very pregnant actress Jaclyn Smith, one of Charlie's former angels, now flying high with the stork.

And there is a whole galaxy of pregnant stars, TV anchorwomen and even your neighbor getting pregnant on purpose. Even Patricia Hearst — remember her? — was on the People cover with her baby recently.

None of my generation ever made the front of Time or any other magazine, even the church bulletin, in a head-on, frontal "preggers" shot. I didn't even make the front of my parents' Christmas letter when I was pregnant with my first child.

In the 1940s it was glamorous and patriotic to be pregnant because your husband was going off to war. We all ran around getting married, first, and then having the baby so your soldier could come home to his child and the mother could say, "This is your daddy, honey."

Then in the '50s, we were all still hanging out diapers. But there was a restlessness about it all. I can remember when I was pregnant with my fourth child, we decided not to tell my mother until the baby needed roller skates.

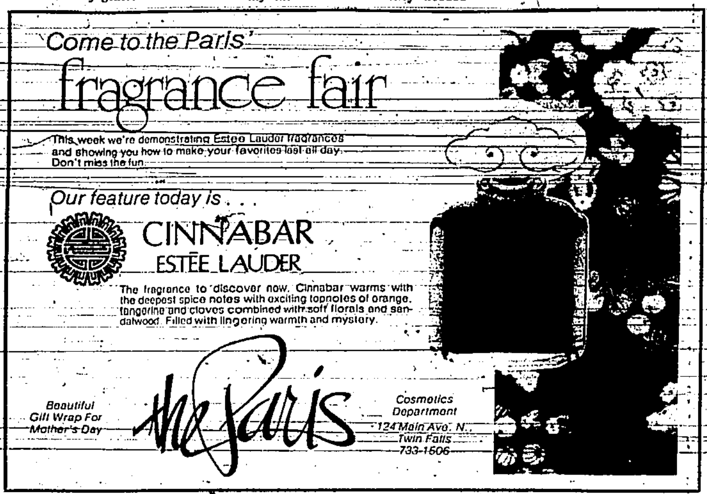

You see, she thought anything over two children was slightly obscene. In the end, she came for a visit and we had to break the news to her. But we gave her a three-martini dinner first.

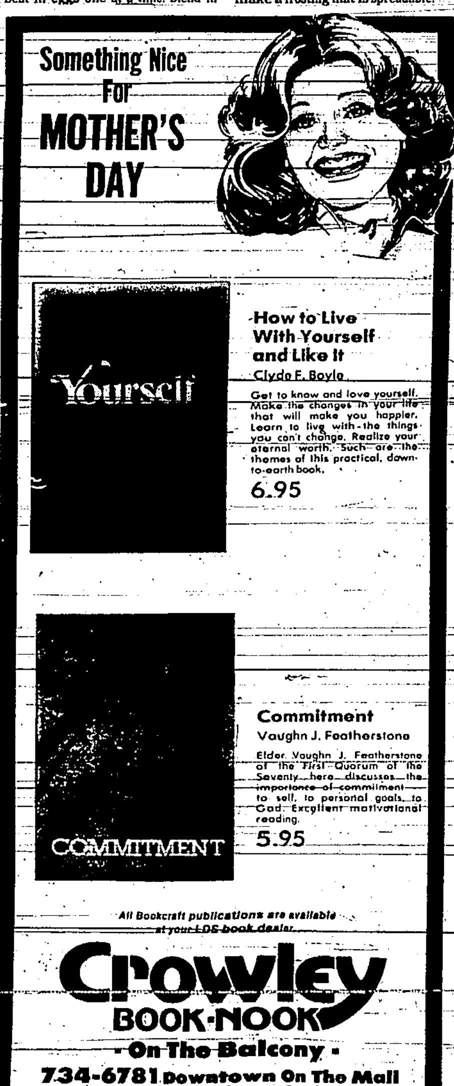

Unlike Jacyln Smith's mother, who probably said "Wonderful, darling," my mother said, "No, you can't mean it!" But we did.

Then came the '60s and the pill and women could choose when — and whether to have children. In the '70s, of course, young mothers were opting for careers, liberated at last from the diaper pail.

So what is happening in the '80s to spur this back-to-the-cradle trend?

The U.S. birthrate is the highest it's ever been.

Designers adjust to economic slump

By MARY GOTTSCHALK
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

NEW YORK — How much? A year ago this question from reporters covering the annual fall fashion rites here brought long silences from designers' staffs, or icy replies such as, "Why do you have to write about something like prices?"

But this year, the times — and the economy — have changed. Some designers are actually volunteering price information. And at least one designer is consciously trying to trim prices.

"Miracle of miracles," declared a prepared statement from Adri during her showing last week. "Adri's prices run from 28 to 31 percent less than last fall's."

Miracle, indeed. Adri is one of a growing number of designers who seem not only aware of economic pressures, but also willing to address the problem.

What happened? Well, such things as the economy and soaring utility bills have caused many women to think twice about spending $1,000 or more on an evening dress. Even Nancy Reagan wasn't buying designer clothes; she was borrowing them.

Remember those terrific sales that came before Christmas last year instead of after? The merchandise simply wasn't moving off the racks as retailers had planned. These ghosts of Christmas past remain firmly in the minds of almost everyone viewing the fall fashion shows.

Adri devoted a significant portion of her show to separates retailing at less than $60 each. But to achieve this, Adri had to sacrifice natural fibers. "I cringe at the thought of using acrylic, but I wanted everything to be washable and under $60," she says.

And Pauline Trigere, presenting her first collection for Schrader, called the retail prices "extraordinary," and mentioned specifics throughout the show. And extraordinary they were for a top-line designer, with silk dresses priced between $280 and $350, ultrasuede suits $550 to $600, and a two-piece evening outfit for $450. Her couture collection prices are easily double these.

Also price-conscious is a group of six designers that banded together to present one show, sharing expenses of renting an auditorium, hiring models and publicity. Participating were Lester Hyatt, offering apparel with retail prices beginning at $70; Jonathan Hitchcock for Reuben Thomas, with prices from $200; Beged-Or Italia, from $280; C'est Simone by George Simonton, from $180; Giuseppe, from $78; and Leon Max, from $46.

Other designers, like DDDominick, had second thoughts about the costs of producing a formal fashion show and canceled. Others, including Willi Smith for Willi Wear, scaled down the shows drastically to a showroom setting.

But why do designer clothes cost so much? To understand the pricing, follow a typical designer blouse — this one a silk crepe de chine from Bill Blass — through its steps, from drawing board to store rack.

The first cost is the actual manufacturing of the garment, usually done by contractors. Material and sewing notions such as buttons are $59. Labor to cut, assemble, sew and hand-finish the blouse comes to another $59. On top of that the contractor adds $24.78 to cover his costs, such as employee benefits and Social Security, the rent on his building, operating expenses and profit.

The blouse then is billed to the designer at $142.38. Now the designer needs to be compensated for the time spent designing the blouse, the costs of maintaining a staff, office rent (showrooms like Halston's on the 21st floor of Olympic Towers overlooking St. Patrick's Cathedral and Fifth Avenue are not cheap), and profit. So the designer settles on a $295 wholesale price.

Stores, in turn, have employees, rent, operating expenses, shipping costs and profit considerations. Traditionally, stores simply double the wholesale price, so that Bill Blass is now carrying a $600 price tag.

If the blouse doesn't sell at $600, it's going to be marked down. One or two $600 blouses that sell for $300 is something most stores can live with.

TV gardener's 'degree' came from trial and error process

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Television gardener Dick Raymond likes to say he has a PHD — a Practical Horticultural Degree.

The genial Vermonter and star of the nationally syndicated television gardening series Dick Raymond's Garden says he learned to garden "by trial and error."

The youngest of nine children, Raymond was born on a Vermont farm during the Depression and started to help grow food for his family when he was 6 years old.

"It's surprising how quickly you learn," Raymond said in a recent telephone interview.

Raymond and his wife, Jan, live within view of the house where he was born in North Ferrisburg more than 50 years ago.

His 8 ½ acre test gardens there include a 24-by-24-foot vegetable plot he calls his eternal yield garden.

"I've never fed this garden an ounce of fertilizer — no compost, no manure, nothing. But it's fed me plenty for the past 10 years."

As soon as he can work the soil in spring, Raymond plants half the plot to peas and the other half to a wide variety of his family's favorite vegetables — squash, onions, carrots, beets, potatoes, cucumbers and tomatoes, to name a few.

Each year he switches, planting English peas and snap beans where the other vegetables had been, and vice versa.

He also changes the positions of the vegetable rows every other year — to help prevent damage from soil-borne disease.

He said he gets along without commercial fertilizer because the peas and snap beans provide "green manure." He said they take nitrogen from the air and fix it to their roots. When they are tilled under after harvest, they return more nitrogen to the soil than they needed to grow. They enrich the soil with essential nutrients and organic matter to nourish other crops that follow.

Raymond said he tested his crop rotation system for 10 years before writing about it.

As soon as the pea crop is picked, he tills in the green vines and plants snap beans that will also give nitrogen to the soil and will grow well during the hot days of summer as peas will not.

After the bean season ends, he tills under their plants and puts in annual ryegrass to insulate and protect the soil during the winter. He also plants annual ryegrass on the other half after the harvest is over.

Over the years he and Mrs. Raymond have filled their root cellar with hundreds of jars of home-canned vegetables, pickles, relishes and fruit, and baskets of squash, carrots, onions, beets and potatoes.

Gardening even helped them pay for their house, he said. Fifteen or more years ago they grew so much on a one-acre plot, he said, "it was easy to make $1,000 to $1,500 a season" selling the excess produce at a roadside stand.

While his neighbors were picking their first crop, he was harvesting his second.

"I had everything early, so I always got top price."

His enthusiasm for gardening is shared by the whole family — which includes three daughters and five grandchildren, ranging in age from a few weeks to 10 years.

Well, Raymond admitted, the 3-week-old grandson isn't quite ready for it yet, but the 10-year-old, Brian Bordeaux, has had his own garden since he was 3 years old.

Gardening problems answered

By United Press International

Questions on home gardening, with answers by Dick Raymond, host of the nationally syndicated television series "Dick Raymond's Garden":

Q. We plant lots of spinach because it is so nutritious. But we never seem to get enough of it before it bolts in hot weather. Is there any way to keep spinach from going to seed so quickly? S.F. — Pa.

A. If you use my cut-and-come-again method of harvesting, you should get plenty of spinach before the hottest summer weather sets in.

I plant my spinach in wide rows as soon as the soil can be worked in the spring. A wide row is a band of solid vegetables one rake width wide. I broadcast my spinach seed over the entire width of this wide row. Then, when my spinach is 4 to 6 inches high, I take a long knife out to the garden and cut the row down to one inch in height.

Most people just pick at the biggest leaves in the row and end up with most of their spinach unharvested by the time it goes to seed. But after I cut my spinach down, it comes right back with more growth for another harvest.

To keep your greens producing all summer, plant Swiss chard, too. Chard keeps producing even through the hottest weather. I cut back chard, lettuce, and other leafy greens the way I do my spinach, and they come back with three or four harvests during the season.

Q. I usually get lots of beautiful tomatoes, but far too often I find their bottom side turning black and rotting. What can I do? W.A. — Texas

A. You have a tomato problem that everyone will see sometime. It's called blossom end rot, and it's caused by a lack of moisture. This prevents the plants from taking up the calcium they need. Without calcium the blossom end of the tomato starts to rot. Use mulches and water evenly and thoroughly when things dry out to help this problem. You can also spray the leaves of the plants with calcium chloride, which is sold as de-icing salt. When blossom end rot first appears, mix 2 tablespoons to 1 gallon of water. Spray two or three times a week. This should keep your tomatoes in good shape.

Q. Boy, do I hate slugs! They get in my lettuce and I don't know how I can keep them out. We live where there's lots of rain. Do I have to put up with slugs? W.M. — Ore.

A. You don't have to put with them, though dealing with these slimy snails-without-shells is not the most pleasant job. I use some home remedies that seem to take care of about 95 percent of the problem for me.

I place wide boards, plants, or even heavy cardboard around the garden and between the rows. Slugs like to crawl under the planks to stay cool and avoid sunlight during the day. So at high noon I go around the garden, flip the boards over and destroy the slugs.

Or if you're a beer drinker, share a little bit of beer with your slugs. Save your beer cans with just a little beer in the bottom. Then, lay the cans down on their sides, burying them right up to their openings. The slugs will crawl right in after the beer and come to a happy ending.

If none of these home remedies sounds good to you, there are commercial slug baits at most garden stores.

The most frequently sung songs in English are "Happy Birthday to You," released in 1935, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," known at least as early as 1781, and "Auld Lang Syne," 1759. "Happy Birthday" is the only one of the three ever sung in space.

Republic loser over quarter

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Republic Airlines Inc. had a $22.6 million loss in the first quarter on a 6 percent gain in revenue.

The loss on revenues of $372.7 million compared with a loss of $15.2 million, after a gain on the sale of surplus equipment, a year ago on revenues of $351.1 million.

President Daniel F. May said Republic's loss was one of the smallest in the industry and he blamed it mainly on cutthroat fare slashing. He said the fare slashing is eroding airline stability and should have been held to a maximum instead of the 40-percent cuts currently in vogue.

May said the entire discount fare structure needs to be simplified to three or four discounts with advance purchase requirements.

DuPont sales, earnings off

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) — DuPont Co. Monday reported an overall 20 percent decline in both sales and earnings for the first quarter.

The results included those of Conoco, the oil and coal firm acquired last year.

Net income for the quarter was $250 million or $1.06 a share on sales of $8.3 billion. That compared with $314 million or $1.33 a share on sales on $8.1 billion pro forma a year ago and with $208 million or $1.32 a share on sales of $3.7 billion for DuPont alone a year ago.

More dividends on decline

NEW YORK (UPI) — Standard & Poor's Corp. said Monday the number of companies reporting increased dividend payments during April declined 33 percent from the same period last year.

According to The Outlook, a publication of the corporate reporting service, April was the ninth consecutive month in which the number of companies declaring increased dividend payments fell from the year earlier levels.

The reporting service said of the 2,385 dividends declared in April, the total number of favorable dividend actions, including increases, extras and resumptions fell 35 percent to 138 from 210 a year ago.

S&P said 124 companies increased their dividend payments last month, down from 185 in April 1981.

Extra dividends declined to 11 from 20 last year while resumed dividends fell to 3 from 5 in 1981.

S&P said unfavorable dividends, such as decreases and omissions, rose by more than 100 percent to 49 from 21.

Harvester concessions win

DETROIT (UPI) — United Auto Workers members overwhelmingly approved $200 million in contract concessions to the debt-ridden International Harvester Co., the union announced Monday.

The controversial Archie R. McCardell resigned as chairman of the board and chief executive officer and Louis W. Menk was named to replace him.

Donald D. Lennox, formerly president of the IH Manufacturing Group, was named president and chief operating officer of IH, which recently restructured nearly $4 billion in debt.

Menk retired recently as chairman and chief executive officer of Burlington Northern Inc.

UAW Vice President Stephen Yokich said the new contract, which covers some 20,000 active and 10,000 laid-off UAW members in nine states, was approved by 64.2 percent of members voting in a ratification election over the weekend.

Hoechst posts sales gains

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (UPI) — Hoechst Group, the German industrial combine, had a 5.4 percent gain in sales in the first quarter to $3.766 billion from $3.574 billion. Profit for the quarter was not reported.

But the company said it had a 23.4 percent drop in profit for all of 1981 in spite of a 15.1 percent rise in sales.

Profit was $188 million on sales of $15.17 billion compared with $245 million in 1980 on sales of $13.178 billion. No per share figures were disclosed.

Hoechst said its plastics division had a $100 million loss in 1981 but pharmaceutical sales were up 21 percent and fiber sales 32 percent.

Perot sales, profits rise

DALLAS (UPI) — Ross Perot's Electronic Data Systems Corp. had a rise in profit in the March quarter to 44 cents a share from 36 cents a year earlier as sales rose to $125.51 million from $118.89 million.

Net income climbed to $12.12 million from $9.76 million.

Nine months' profit rose to $33.86 million or $1.24 a share on sales of $372.81 million from $27.58 million or $1.01 a share a year ago on sales of $333.1 million.

Minor gains on Wall Street

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, weathering some grim domestic economic news and international fighting reports, rallied for a small gain Monday.

Relatively slow trading demonstrated investor uncertainly.

Datapoint, the once high-flying stock that has been sliding for months, took a shellacking following reports late last week it would have a third-quarter loss instead of just lower earnings.

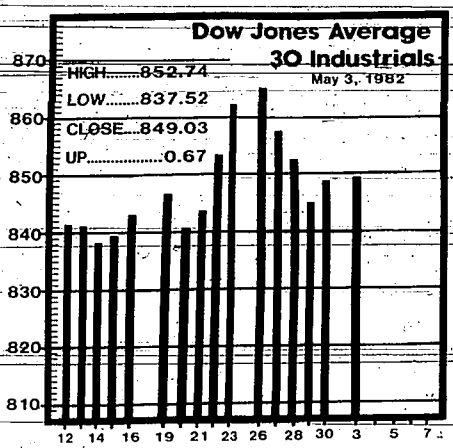

The Dow Jones industrial average, down about 7 points at the outset following Friday's 3.42-point gain, rose 0.67 point to 849.03. The DJIA, which fell 13.80 points overall last week to snap a six-week rally, operated at a 3.33-point deficit since seven component stocks were trading minus their dividends.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.18 to 67.26 and the price of an average share increased seven cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 0.37 to 116.81. Advances edged declines 739-655 among the 1,850 issues traded.

The Big Board volume of 46,490,000 shares, down from the 48,200,000 traded Friday, was the slowest since 45.69 million changed hands April 15.

That slow turnover indicated many investors stayed on the sidelines because of poor earnings reports, huge budget deficits, the recession and international tensions.

The nation's March construction spending fell 0.8 percent and the National Association of Purchasing Management said buying patterns and operating capacity indicated the near-term business outlook remains gloomy.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 53,355,770 compared with 55,738,180 traded Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index added 0.04 to 270.500. There was no change in the price of a share. Declines edged advances 282-246 among the 749 issues traded. Composite volume came to 3,611,700 shares compared with 3,790,335 traded Friday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ index of OTC stocks jumped 0.27 to 184.97.

On the trading floor, Datapoint, which sold at 51¼ earlier this year, was the most active NYSE-listed issue, losing 3⅝ to 13½ following an opening block of 800,000 shares at 12¾. It lost 4⅞ points Friday before revealing it would have a quarterly loss amid questions about its sales tactics.

American Telephone & Telegraph, the nation's most widely held stock, was the second most active issue, up ¼ to 54¾ in trading that included blocks of 115,000 shares and 100,000 shares, both at 54¼.

Exxon, which is abandoning participation in the Colony shale oil project in Colorado, was the third most active Big Board issue, adding ⅛ to 28¾ with a block of 100,000 shares at 28¼.

Tosco, a partner in the project in Colorado, climbed 1¾ to 13½ after Exxon agreed to buy its share in the for $380 million and dispose of it.

Armco (ex-dividend) was fourth on the list, up ¼ to 19¼, and Textron, the conglomerate with large defense operations fell ⅞ to 22½ after a block of 542,700 shares at 21⅞.

Chase Manhattan, one of the nation's largest international lenders, lost ⅞ to 54. Other bank stocks were little changed.

Charter Co., which announced late last week it was selling its Redbook magazine and Charter Data Services units to Hearst Corp. for $23 million, lost ¾ to 8¾ in active trading.

Golden Nugget surrendered ½ to 23⅞.

Coca-Cola stockholders OK studio purchase

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Coca-Cola Co. jumped into the movie business Monday when its stockholders voted overwhelmingly to purchase Columbia Pictures in a deal officials say will "change the nature" of the huge soft drink firm.

"We are obviously pleased that our shareholders voted today to voice their belief that Columbia Pictures Industries is the right vehicle for our entry into this industry," Roberto C. Goizueta, Coke's new chairman, said.

The vote, taken by Coke's stockholders at a meeting in Houston, came three days after the stockholders of Columbia Pictures also overwhelmingly approved the agreement.

The Atlanta-based soft drink company reportedly offered more than $750 million in cash and stock options for Columbia Pictures in January. The plan was approved last month by the directors of both Coke and Columbia.

Coke has offered Columbia shareholders 1.2 Coke shares and $32.625 in cash for each of the motion picture firm's shares. The final price will be the average paid for Coke stock during the 15 days prior to the actual takeover date — which can be no earlier than Sept. 30.

Columbia shareholders will be able to choose the combination of Coke stock and cash, all cash (about $74 per share) or all stock in exchange for their holdings.

But Coke has put a limit of $336.69 million on the actual cash it will expend on the merger.

Although Coke has been moving toward diversification since 1960, the Columbia purchase is by far its most ambitious move.

The movie studio has been extremely successful in recent years, producing big hits in "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," "Kramer vs. Kramer," "The China Syndrome" and "Absence of Malice."

Columbia has assets of $591.1 million, not including the value of the firm's film library. Columbia earned $44.3 million on sales on sales of $686.6 million during its 1981 fiscal year.

But even those figures look small when compared to Coke's own report.

Coke dominates the world's soft drink market with sales of $6 billion.

Court OKs futures market fraud suits

By The Times-News
and United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, in a ruling related to a major commodity-trading scandal, said Monday people victimized by manipulations in futures markets can sue their broker and the exchange for fraud.

The justices, in a 5-to-4 decision, rejected arguments from commodities exchanges and brokers, who claimed that allowing such suits might make them liable for hundreds of millions of dollars in damages.

Until Monday's ruling, commodity traders could seek damages from their brokers due to fraud through an administrative proceeding in front of the federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission. Commodity exchanges, however, were exempt from claims for damages.

The dispute in this case stemmed from the most significant scandal in the recent history of commodity trading — the $9 million default by J.R. Simplot and P.R. Taggares in May 1976. The two leading Pacific Northwest potato producers reneged on futures contracts calling for them to deliver almost 100 million pounds of potatoes.

As part of a settlement with futures-trading regulators in the case, Simplot was fined $50,000. Also, he and his company were barred from trading in potato futures until early 1984.

Meanwhile, traders who had held contracts to take delivery of the potatoes filed suits claiming that Simplot, Taggares and their brokers conspired to manipulate the price of contracts downward to avoid losses.

They also charged that the New York Mercantile Exchange, where the contracts were traded, was negligent because it failed to enforce its trading rules and prevent the manipulation.

A federal district judge dismissed the claims, ruling there was no "implied private right" to sue under the Commodities Exchange Act of 1974, which extensively reorganized commodity trading.

But the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York reversed that decision, concluding that Congress intended to create a private right to sue.

The majority of the Supreme Court endorsed that decision. Writing for the five justices in the majority, Justice John Paul Stevens concluded that history of federal law involving commodities "quite clearly indicates that Congress intended to protect all futures traders from price manipulation and other fraudulent conduct."

"This was a procedural question," said Larry Hunt, a Chicago lawyer who represented a firm of commodity brokers in the case. Since traders can seek damages from their broker through an administrative procedure, the ruling only changes the place and type of proceeding by allowing traders to sue in federal court.

However, commodity exchanges were formerly exempt from claims for damages due to fraud, Hunt said. Lawyers representing the nation's 10 exchanges argued that since exchanges have law-enforcement powers to regulate trading it would be inconsistent to make them subject to lawsuits.

"It does put the exchanges in an unfortunate situation," Hunt said. "Exchanges were expected to enforce the law, and on the other hand, be subject to suits if they guess wrong."

In dissent, Justice Lewis Powell charged that the majority was flatly wrong in its interpretation of what Congress intended in enacting the law. He was joined in dissent by Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justices William Rehnquist and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Powell argued that the court's move to create a "private right" to sue exchanges and brokers "is as likely to disrupt as to assist the functioning of the regulatory schemes developed by Congress.

Know rules about customs before traveling abroad

© Universal Press Syndicate

As both our domestic economic policies and worldwide events push up the dollar's buying value, our currency has once again become a highly desirable shopping medium abroad.

Hundreds of thousands of you will be finding extraordinary bargains in foreign shops this summer. The overseas trek is beginning; despite the business downturn here, the volume of overseas travelers will swell, even may reach new records.

What this adds up to is: CUSTOMS! And even the Reagan administration's budget cutbacks have not yet reduced the number of customs inspectors on duty in the nation's 300 ports of entry. (Last year, the inspectors collected about $16 million on items we brought home not duty free.) To save money and aggravation, know these 10 rules before you go abroad.

1) You are allowed to bring back with you $300 of goods duty-free. This includes items purchased and labeled as presents. The next $600 will be taxed at a flat 10 percent rate. If you plan to visit American territories — such as Samoa, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands — your duty-free allowance rises to $600. A 6-percent charge will be added to the next $600 of goods. Any total above the $600 extension, no matter where bought, will be taxed at the prevailing rate. For some items, this is extremely high.

2) You can bring home one quart of liquor (one gallon if bought in American territories), one carton of cigarettes, 100 cigars. You cannot bring in Cuban cigars unless you are returning from Cuba.

3) You can mail back to the U.S. an unlimited number of gifts valued at $25 or less. Packages must be marked "unsolicited gift" and you can send one gift per recipient per day. Don't try to break up sets. Packages are subject to mail inspection.

4) Request that local sales taxes be listed separately on your invoices, to be sure the taxes are not considered part of the item's price and either raise the amount of duty you owe or eat into your exemption.

5) If a Value Added Tax (VAT) is charged in countries where you buy merchandise, ask the shopkeeper for a receipt identifying the sum of the VAT so you can present it to the U.S. customs inspector. The inspector will validate it for you so you can return the receipt (keep a copy) and request a money order for the specified amount.

6) Get receipts for everything you buy, no matter how small the item or cost. Customs officials have detailed and current knowledge of the value of most items brought into the U.S.

7) Take advantage of the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) — amazingly unfamiliar to even seasoned overseas travelers. This enables you to bring home items normally subject to duty completely free if you bought them in a country covered by this law. The law is designed to help developing countries improve their export trade. As of today, the GSP list covers 140 countries and an astounding variety of items, including baskets, records, wood carvings, cameras. Before you leave the U.S., call the nearest customs office and ask if the countries you plan to visit are covered by the GSP and, if so, whether items you expect to purchase are included as well. Also request the Customs Service's free booklet "GSP and the Traveler."

8) Before you leave the U.S., register with customs any foreign-made items you are taking on your trip, such as Japanese cameras and Swiss watches. If you neglect to do so, customs officials might assume you purchased your belongings overseas and charge you duty.

9) Don't even try to cheat. There isn't a trick nor is there a hiding place they haven't already thoroughly investigated.

10) Ask for "Pocket Hints" from the U.S. Customs Offices, P.O. Box 7118, Washington, D.C. 20044. The pamphlet is free. Its hints are invaluable. Customs duties are in general not so high that you can't meet them. Be safe. Obey the do's and don'ts.

Higher gasoline prices may hit pumps soon

By United Press International

American motorists should find gasoline prices rising between 3 and 4 cents a gallon by mid-May.

That will result from the first round of wholesale price increases in more than a year is passed through to the pump, an industry analyst says.

Industry sources said U.S. refiners had no choice but to increase wholesale gasoline prices to recover higher operating costs after efforts to spur stagnant sales through rebates failed. The alternative was more refinery shutdowns, they said.

About two weeks ago Ashland Oil Co., Murphy Oil Co., Marathon Oil Co. and other independent marketers began lifting wholesale gasoline prices on a regional basis by between three-quarters of a penny and 5 cents a gallon.

Several major oil companies, including Shell Oil Co., Gulf Oil Corp., Amoco Inc., Mobil Corp., and Exxon U.S.A., followed suit and boosted wholesale prices by 1 to 3 cents.

"Gasoline prices have been tumbling, but they're starting to firm up a bit in certain sections of the country," an Ashland spokesman said.

The average U.S. pump price had dropped by 20 cents a gallon in mid-April from an all-time high of $1.3777 in March 1981, according to the Los Angeles-based Lundberg Letter, which tracks gasoline prices.

But Dan Lundberg, publisher of the letter, forecast the turnaround in the U.S. gasoline market on April 17 because the independents had started to ratchet up prices.

"The present round of wholesale increases, which has now been logged nationwide, has so pressured the retail marketing community that motorists will be paying 3 to 4 cents a gallon more for gasoline as early as the middle of this month," Lundberg told UPI.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat and corn were lower and oats and soybeans mixed at the close Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was off 3 to ¾ cents; corn off 2¾ to 4½; oats up 1¾ to off ¾; and soybeans off 2 to up 2 cents.

The market was relatively quiet in the wake of Friday's volatile action, grain analysts said.

Some consolidation was noted in the soybean pit and wheat was pressured by commission house selling.

Grain and soybean prices declined about one hour into the session in line with a drop in gold prices.

The market opened higher, but not as high as expected, on the continued tension over the Falkland Islands.

Ideal weather conditions for field work and corn planting also weighed on sentiment.

Country movement was light.

The outside markets were lower.

Louisiana Pacific posts loss

PORTLAND— Louisiana Pacific Corp. reports net income of $3.1 million on sales of $196.6 million during the first quarter of 1982.

The company had a loss of $11.8 million before the effects of an accounting change which added $14.9 million to first quarter earnings.

The loss compares to earnings of $15.7 million before extraordinary gain in the first quarter of 1981. Sales this year of $196.6 million were down 26 percent from $267.2 million in the first quarter of 1981.

Pitney Bowes revenue, profit up

STAMFORD, Conn. (UPI) —Pitney Bowes, Inc., reported a 41 percent increase in profit for the first quarter on a 6 percent rise in revenue.

Net income was $15.46 million or 81 cents a share on revenues of $342.21 million, up from $10.93 million or 61 cents a share a year ago on revenues of $322.26 million.

Sales were up 2 percent, rentals gained 18 percent, service revenues 13 percent and financing equity contributions 38 percent.

Hughes Tool earnings up

HOUSTON (UPI) — Hughes Tool Co. earned $1.19 a share in the first quarter, up from 95 cents a year ago, as sales rose to $494.55 million from $389.52 million.)"

Net income rose to $67.36 million from $52.7 million. The profit gain was 28 percent and the sales rise 27 percent.

Chairman James R. Lesch said the rise in oil and gas drilling activity produced the gains even though drilling was down 20 percent from the late 1981 peak, but it was up 18.4 percent from the level of the first quarter last year.

Crane sales, net decline

NEW YORK (UPI) — Crane Co., a diversified manufacturer of steel, cement, building products and aerospace systems, reported lower sales and net income for the first quarter ended March 31.

Continuing high interest rates and the economy's slump caused net income to drop to $5.6 million or 56 cents a share for the primary quarter compared with $10.1 million or 96 cents per share reported for the 1981 first quarter, Crane said.

Sales for the period decreased to $316.7 million compared with $374.8 million for the year ago quarter.

Boeing says profits down

SEATTLE (UPI) — Boeing Co. profits declined 58 percent during the first quarter because of high startup costs for three new jetliners and reduced deliveries of its existing lines, Chairman T. A. Wilson said.

He told the firm's annual stockholders meeting earnings were $61 million, or 63 cents a share, on sales of $2.09 billion, compared a net of $144 million, or 1.44 a share, on sales of $2.42 billion in the first quarter of 1981.

The firm's board of directors declared a dividend of 35 cents a share for the second quarter, payable June 10 to stockholders of record May 14, and intends to maintain dividends at the current level for the remainder of the year, Wilson said.

Merger effective June 1

ROANOKE, Va. (UPI) — Norfolk & Western Railway Co. and Southern Railway Co. have set June 1 as the date for their planned consolidation to take effect, N&W officials said.

Under the terms of the merger, which was approved by both companies' stockholders in 1980 and by the Interstate Commerce Commission last month, daily operations of each company will continue separately.

Matsushita reports gains

OSAKA, Japan (UPI) — Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. said it had a 9 percent gain in both sales and earnings in the first quarter.

Earnings rose to 95 cents per American depository share from 90 cents a year earlier and sales grew to $5.57 billion from $5.29 billion.

Net income rose to $147.76 million from $135.72 million. The sales growth was led by video tape recorders and other video equipment. Sales of these lines were up 26 percent.

Pan Am posts big losses

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pan American World Airways announced a loss of $127.3 million in the first quarter compared with a loss of $114.5 million a year ago.

Then, earnings of International Hotels Corp., since sold, reduced the loss from $121.6 million.

Revenues fell 2.4 percent from a year ago of $853.8 million. Operating expense declined 0.9 percent to $953.9 million.

Airline revenue was down 3.6 percent and airline operating costs fell 1.8 percent.

Good quarter for Pepsico

PURCHASE, N.Y. (UPI) — Strong domestic sales of both foods and soft drinks enabled Pepsico Inc. to increase first quarter earnings to 65 cents a share from 50 cents a year ago.

The 12 percent gain in per share earnings came on a 6 percent rise in sales to $1.56 billion from $1.467 billion.

Net income was up 14 percent at $60.14 million from $52.81 million.

Chairman Donald M. Kendall said foreign soft drink sales were weaker but domestic case sales of beverages were up 4 percent and food product sales were 7 percent higher. Foreign snack food sales were up 17 percent.

Times-Mirror profits off

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — First quarter profit of Times-Mirror Co. dropped to 59 cents a share from 76 cents a year ago in spite of a gain of 21 cents a share on the sale of real estate.

Net income fell to $20.1 million on sales of $522.34 million from $25.98 million a year ago on sales of $500.69 million.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Businessmen are guardedly optimistic that second quarter sales and profits will show a modest increase from the dismal first quarter, the latest survey by Dun & Bradstreet shows.

D&B's Sales Optimism Index rose 10 points to 40 from the prior quarter, and the Profits Optimism Index was up by 9 points overall to 31. D&B's index is arrived at by subtracting the percentage seeing a decrease from the percentage expecting an increase.

"The upward shift in outlook, while modest, might signal a wary hope by business leaders that there is a light at the end of the recessionary tunnel," William Doescher, vice president of the business information and credit rating firm, said.

The rise in the optimism from the previous three month period, however, was from the lowest level since the third quarter of 1980.

"That precipitous decline in confidence was borne out by the extremely high rate of business failures recorded by D&B for the first 14 weeks of 1982," Doescher said.

D&B recorded 6,205 business failures in the first 14 weeks of the year, a 55.5 percent increase from 3,991 in the corresponding 1981 period. D&B said if this pace were to continue throughout the year it would mean 61 failures for every 10,000 listed businesses.

The most optimistic outlook for sales came surprisingly from manufacturers, which moved up 15 points. The sales optimism index for wholesalers and retailers moved up 5 and 7 points, respectively, the survey showed.

Retailers, however, showed the greatest enthusiasm for improved profits in the second quarter, with 17 percent saying that they expected improved bottom line figures in the quarter.

Other findings of D&B's quarterly survey, which is conducted by interviewing 1,400 executives in manufacturing, retailing and wholesaling:

•Inflationary pressures are viewed as being on the decline. Fewer executives — 60 percent — looked for price increases than at any time since the first quarter of 1976.

•The employment outlook remained unchanged from the first quarter at its lowest level since the third quarter of 1980 — 14 percent of executives saw probable growth.

•Optimism that new orders would rise moved up 9 points to 51 percent, but still remained below any quarter of 1981.

•The outlook for inventories was about unchanged; 45 percent expected inventories to remain steady and 34 percent saw an increase. Retailers were the only group who expected a cutback.

Business failures on rise again

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dun & Bradstreet Inc. reported Tuesday that business failures for the week ended April 22 rose by 13 percent to 511, the largest increase in business failures since Feb. 11 when 529 concerns folded.

The corporate credit rating service said the latest week's failures compared with 452 in the previous week and 407 failures for the same period last year.

The business economics division of Dun & Bradstreet said the week's casualties included all types of operations, with the sharpest climb in retailing.

D&B said wholesaling showed the only decrease in failures.

Five of the nine major geographic regions had increases, the service said with the East North Central states leading the decline, followed by the Pacific and mountain.

Dun & Bradstreet said that business failures for the year totalled 7,168 compared with 4,791 closings during the same period in 1981.

Liabilities of $100,000 or more were involved in 269 of the week's failures, up from 245 last week and 204 from last year.

The reporting service said smaller liabilities, under $100,000, rose to 242 from 207 compared with 203 last year.

Oil shale project closing

DENVER (UPI) — Exxon U.S.A. announced Sunday it will begin shutting down construction of the multi-billion-dollar Colony Project in western Colorado, a facility industry officials expected to be the nation's biggest oil shale project.

The company said unfavorable economics and massive cost overruns prompted the decision, a blow for the embryonic oil shale industry which has been touted since the early decades of the 20th century. A former Colorado governor who pushed the project estimated it could cost the state 10,000 jobs.

The reserves of shale oil locked in the fine-textured rock of western Colorado have been compared to the crude reserves of the Middle East. But the cost of extracting the oil from the rock deterred attempts at commercial production until crude prices skyrocketed in the early 1970s.

Exxon owns a 60 percent interest in the project with Tosco, a Los Angeles-based oil shale refiner which won approval for a $1.1 billion federal loan guarantee from the U.S. Synfuels Corporation. Exxon did not use government financing for its part in the project.

"This decision was reached only last week and on April 30, Tosco was promptly advised of Exxon's decision," Exxon U.S.A. President Randall Meyer said in a statement issued from the company's Houston office.

The cost of the massive project located amid the arid escarpments of Garfield County 185 miles from Denver, initially was estimated at between $2 billion and $3 billion, but the latest cost estimates ballooned to between $5 billion and $6 billion.

Spratly Islands: The next Falklands?

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — With world attention centered on the Falklands, the Philippines has underlined its determination to defend its claim to a small group of coral reefs that could become the next flash point in Asia.

Potentially rich in oil, the Spratly Islands in the South China Sea are claimed, in whole or part, by Vietnam, Taiwan, China, Malaysia and the Philippines. The Philippines has a 35-year-old mutual defense treaty with the United States.

If fighting broke out between claimants to the Spratlys, the United States could possibly be dragged into another conflict in Asia — maybe even again against Vietnam.

The Spratlys are located about 400 miles southeast of Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon), about halfway between Vietnam and the Malaysian-ruled section of Borneo. The islands are about 800 miles southwest of Manila but the Philippines reach to within about 350 miles of the Spratly group made up of 57 islands or islets — some of them visible only at low tide.

Philippines Prime Minister Cesar Virata last week visited a part of the Spratlys that the government has renamed Kalayaan (Freedomland).

The highest Filipino official to visit the isles, Virata inspected military and naval fortifications and told a reporter, "We will defend Kalayaan because it is ours.

"Any offensive action against Kalayaan will be considered an assault on the sovereignty of the republic," the 51-year-old Virata said.

Virata found the 225-acre main island of Kalayaan bristling with Philippine fortifications, including a newly completed 4,265-foot concrete runway that is longer than the island itself and had to be partially built on reclaimed land.

About 500 marine and navy personnel are stationed on Kalayaan, some of them deployed on six nearby isles which Manila says are also part of its territory.

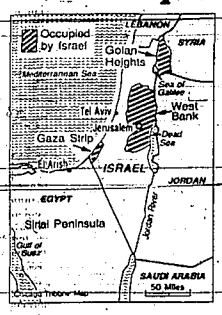

"I am hoping that with the establishment of this frontier in the Philippines, we can allow a peaceful approach to the large territorial waters around the Philippines for the determination as to whatever seabed resources or underground resources we could obtain for the development of our country," Virata said in in prepared remarks to the troops.

He referred to suspected oil deposits in the area, which could be the source of conflict among the claimants.

Along with the Philippines, Malaysia, Taiwan and Vietnam have established garrisons on islands they claim, raising the possibility that the verbal dispute over the barren islands could escalate.

After painful withdrawal from the Sinai

Israel planning to annex West Bank, Gaza

By MEL LAVINER
United Press International

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Menachem Begin told Parliament Monday Israel intends to annex the occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip after a self rule plan for the 1.2 million Palestinians living there is established.

He also pledged Israel will never uproot any more Jewish settlements in occupied Arab territory in future peace negotiations — as it did in Sinai for peace with Egypt.

Speaking at the opening summer session of the Knesset (Parliament), Begin said:

"I herewith serve notice, on behalf of the government, that when the time comes for the application of national sovereignty to Judea, Samaria (the West Bank) and the Gaza district, we shall continue to maintain full autonomy for the Arab inhabitants of these areas of Eretz Israel (Land of Israel)."

Judea and Samaria is the biblical name Begin uses to refer to the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River which Israel captured from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East War along with the Gaza Strip from Egypt.

"Israel is going to ask for the right to annex the territories," Begin's spokesman Uri Porath said later in explaining the prime minister's statement. "After five years, everybody puts forth their claim. Israel's demand is sovereignty on that territory."

He referred to a five-year period of autonomy envisioned in the Camp David accords for the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza, after which the future of the territories will be settled in negotiations.

"If you say you annex it now, there is nothing to negotiate about," he said.

In commenting on the question of Jewish settlements, Begin said:

"It is self-understood . . . that in any future negotiations for the signing of peace treaties between Israel and its neighbors, any suggestion of the dismantlment or removal of any settlement in which Israeli citizens and members of the Jewish people have settled and reside will be rejected."

Labor Party opposition leader Shimon Peres, responding to Begin's remarks, said his vow to retain settlements in occupied territory, was prompted by "bad conscience" over the evacuation of the Sinai.

25,000 protestors clash with Polish police

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Hundreds of riot police firing tear gas and water cannons clashed Monday with 25,000 Solidarity supporters who took to the streets shouting "Murderers!" and singing Poland's national anthem.

Street battles spread to several parts of the Polish capital, including outside the Communist Party headquarters, as military helicopters directed at least 500 police to disperse the defiant throngs in the worst clashes since martial law was imposed nearly five months ago.

Citing "demonstrations and incidents in the streets of Warsaw and some other Polish towns" — which sources said included Gdansk — authorities promptly cut telephone links in the capital and threatened to re-introduce a curfew as "Radio Solidarity," the clandestine voice of the outlawed union, planned another broadcast.

"It is a tragedy that there are still people who want to disrupt things this way," Deputy Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski told a news conference.

Witnesses said several protesters were severely beaten and an undetermined number of people seized after truncheon-wielding police used tear gas and water cannons to break up the protest.

In Washington, the State Department said the use of force by authorities, "is another reminder that what is needed is a return to a genuine dialogue in that troubled country."

"We deplore (the use of force by authorities) and find it indicative of the deep cleavages which continue to exist in Poland," a spokesman said.

The riot came just as authorities had eased some martial law restrictions.

Witnesses reported clashes in at least four points in the city. Half a dozen ambulances sped to the scene of the main demonstration in Warsaw's Old Town, sirens wailing.

The historic district was virtually sealed by lumbering military vehicles and the infamous "Zomo" riot police carrying clear plastic shields, long white truncheons, automatic rifles and wearing thick-visored helmets.

Police and demonstrators fought running battles in the narrow cobbled streets. The protesters ripped up paving stones and grabbed cafe chairs and tables to build barricades in the picturesque Old Market square.

"You are a Pole; how can you do this?" shouted an elderly woman to a riot policeman.

"Don't try to educate me," he snapped back. "I am what I am."

The angry crowd tore down red communist banners festooned along side streets from the main demonstration, which was called to mark the signing of Poland's constitution of May 3, 1791 and the Feast Day of Mary.

The demonstrators poured into the broad square outside the royal palace heeding calls launched during massive anti-state May Day demonstrations that authorities had permitted.

But the military rulers later threatened to take stern action to prevent further protests.

Waving red and white Polish flags with "Solidarnosc" emblazoned on them, the marchers chanted, "Down with the Junta," and "Long Live Solidarity," as they massed in the morning.

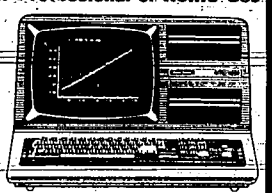

Police soon sealed off the area and a loudspeaker twice blared orders to disperse.

Voting Rights Act agreement reached

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Bob Dole and a group of liberal colleagues Monday offered a compromise formula for breaking a Senate Judiciary Committee deadlock on extending the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Dole, R-Kan., called a late-afternoon news conference along with Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Charles Mathias, R-Md., and others to announce an agreement reached after three weeks of negotiation.

Kennedy and Mathias are sponsors of a bill that would apply a "results test" under which minorities could challenge election systems by pointing to election outcomes as evidence of racial bias.

Sources said the compromise version would retain the "results test," but that mere failure of minority candidates to win elections would not be part of the test, and that courts would be prohibited from requiring "proportional representation" as a remedy for discrimination.

Insiders said the compromise instantly picked up additional support for the Kennedy-Mathias bill, which already was co-sponsored by 65 senators, including nine of the 18 committee members, and virtually assured Senate approval.

SEN. TED KENNEDY
Gets his 'results test.'

SEN. BOB DOLE
Announced a compromise.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, backed by the administration, had argued a results test would lead federal courts to dismantle local governments wherever minority candidates do not get elected in proportion to their population ratios.

The House has passed legislation embodying the results test, aimed at overturning a 1980 Supreme Court decision that at-large elections in Mobile, Ala., were not illegal because no intent to discriminate had been proven.

Civil rights groups say intent is extremely difficult, if not impossible, to prove.

New legislation is needed primarily to extend an enforcement provision that requires jurisdictions with histories of pre-1965 discrimination to get prior federal approval for any change in voting laws or practices.

Unless Congress acts, this key provision expires Aug. 6.

The Senate compromise would extend this provision for 25 years, subject to congressional review after 15 years, and also would allow covered jurisdictions to bail themselves out before then by achieving good compliance records.

The bail-out terms are identical to those adopted by the House. Conservatives have argued the terms are so strict that no jurisdiction could ever comply with them.

Committee conservatives, backed by the Reagan administration, have backed a bill that would extend the provision 10 years, with no bail-out provision.

4,000 stampede into World's Fair

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — A crowd of up to 4,000 World's Fair tourists, angered because of slow-moving ticket lines, chanted "We want in!" Monday and fair officials finally opened a gate and let them in free.

Fair spokesman Bill Carroll said the crowd began lining up at the fair's east gate before the 10 a.m. opening time and was grumbling when attendants did not begin selling tickets until 45 minutes later.

"The money hadn't been delivered at the ticket booths so the attendants could make change," said Carroll. "They waited and waited and people kept backing up and backing up."

Smoking, pill use new risk?

NEW YORK (UPI) — The risk of heart attack from past use of birth control pills is concentrated among older women who smoke and who were in their 30s when taking oral contraceptives, researchers reported Monday.

The scientists estimated there are approximately 2,500 excess deaths from myocardial infarction in the United States each year among women 40 to 49 who smoke and are current or former users of the pill.

There is no evidence of a residual risk of heart attack among women who had used the pill when they were young (under 30) and then stopped, said the report in "Family Planning Perspectives," journal of the Alan Guttmacher Institute.

The report is based on an analysis by federal epidemiologists of a widely publicized study by the Drug Epidemiology Unit at Boston University — the first to report an increased risk of heart attack among past users of the pill, a risk found increasing with age and duration of past pill use.

Epidemiologists look for patterns in diseases and conditions threatening health or life, attempting to line up possible causes. When links are found, they issue precautions in an attempt to prevent recurrences.

At the peak of its use in the United States, about 10 million women were on the pill. As reports of side effects increased, use slumped to below seven million.

Health detectives analyzing the Boston University figures include doctors Peter M. Layde and Howard W. Ory, James J. Schlesselman. Ory and Layde are with the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga. Schlesselman is a staffer at the Uniformed Services University of Health in Bethesda, Md.

The researchers looked at patterns among women 40 to 49 in a large case-control study of oral contraceptives under way at the Centers for Disease Control.

"We estimate that there are approximately 2,500 excess deaths from myocardial infarction in the United States each year among women in this age group who smoke and are current or former users of oral contraceptives," the health detectives said.

"Approximately 5 percent of the excess deaths (125 per year) are attributable to current oral contraceptive use; 10 percent (250 per year) to past use of oral contraceptives.

"The preponderance (85 percent) of the excess heart attack deaths — 2,125 per year — are attributable to cigarette smoking."

"The report provides further weight to the recommendation that older pill users who smoke should quit smoking or consider other methods of contraception."

Naval drills draw protest

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI) — The Navy tested evacuation procedures Monday by flying 300 civilians out of Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and sending in 400 Marines as part of a $12 million exercise that has drawn complaints from the Cuban government.

Monday's exercise, called a non-combatant evacuation operation, was created to test military evacuation procedures in areas where U.S. citizens may have to be flown to safety in a hurry, officials said.

It was the first of several "Operation Ocean Venture 82" exercises scheduled this week that will culminate in a mock Marine invasion of Puerto Rico Friday, officials said.

"Operation Ocean Venture 82," which began last month and runs through May 17, is the third and largest military exercise in the Caribbean Basin this year.

Only one bank gives you the right to move all over the West and have your bank move with you.

Other banks don't give you this right. Only First Interstate Bank does.

Because only the First Interstate System has banking offices throughout an 11-state territory.

Which means, when you move in the West, you can move all the money, respect, and good will you've built up over the years from one First Interstate Bank to another.

You also have the right to get instant cash from over 600 Day & Night Teller® machines throughout the West. And the right to cash a personal check for up to $200 at over 900 bank offices in the West.

No other bank gives you any of these rights. But at First Interstate Bank, they all come with the territory.

Convenience. It comes with the territory.

Critics claim new policy favors nuclear, oil options

Sun Day 'eclipsed' by Reagan budget cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — After four years in the sun, the solar energy industry is being eclipsed by Reagan administration budget policies, congressional critics said Monday.

Marking the fourth anniversary of Sun Day minus the hoopla of the first event when dozens of congressmen formed a solar coalition — only Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., and Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., attended an indoor news conference at the Capitol on a brilliantly sunny day.

Although solar technology is growing fast, the administration has proposed an 88 percent cut in aid to the fledgling industry and is relying instead on long-term, high-risk energy projects, said a study by the Solar Lobby and the Center for Renewable Resources.

The only remnant from solar energy's prominence in preceding administrations, said Spokesman Richard Munson, are the solar collectors atop the White House.

"One of the most amazing things in the past year and a half is the disappearance of the energy issue from the scene," said Hart.

"The president took office reversing eight years of a policy of energy independence," with his only moves attempting to decontrol oil and gas prices and to develop a Rapid Deployment Force "to fight for someone else's oil," Hart said.

Ottinger, referring to Reagan's "solar eclipse budget," said the administration "offers solar and conservation a free market, to be sure. But it offers a free lunch to the nuclear and oil and gas industries."

Munson said appropriations for solar energy have plummeted from a high of about $570 million in 1980 and energy conservation from $780 million to a combined total of below $100 million this fiscal year.

At the same time, nuclear energy has had a 13 percent increase. "Solar and conservation advocates simply want a balanced energy program where government subsidies do not distort the marketplace in favor of the oil and nuclear power industries," he said.

In California, where the state has stressed development of alternative energy forms, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. proclaimed Sun Day Monday and also ripped into Reagan's funding policies.

The governor said the president proposes, in his budget to slash support for "renewable energy sources and energy conservation to unacceptably low levels," while moving to pour "billions of taxpayer dollars down the technological rat hole of nuclear reprocessing and breeder reactors."

California has emphasized the development of alternative energy and now has 150,000 solar installations for heating buildings and water — one in every four in the United States.

The study issued in Washington Monday said solar cells cost only half as much as they did in 1978, and sophisticated computer programs have improved their effectiveness in home heating and cooling.

It said the number of passive solar homes grew from 300 in 1977 to from 60,000 to 80,000 by 1982. Sales of active solar collectors grew from $17 million in 1975 to $400 million in 1981, translating into annual fuel savings equivalent of more than 1 million barrels of oil, it added.

Legion chief criticizes VA cutbacks

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Veterans Administration chief Robert P. Nimmo's "totally irresponsible" comments on curbing VA hospital construction have caused "unnecessary anxiety" among war veterans, American Legion officials said Monday.

Legion National Commander Jack W. Flynt responded to Nimmo's recent remarks implying that the VA medical system was built on political foundations rather than patient need and that new construction is unnecessary.

At stake are 56 medical construction projects at VA hospitals in this country, projects which Nimmo halted in February pending a review by a VA task force.

Bell defends student aid cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Education Secretary Terrel Bell said Monday the administration will push its "reasonable" and "moderate" proposals to trim student aid despite resistance in Congress, and predicted some will be approved.

Bell's statement came at a wide-ranging news conference in which he denied reports he is considering resigning and said the administration's proposal to abolish his department is not dead.

The administration's proposed fiscal 1983 cuts include $800 million from the guaranteed student loan program and nearly $1 billion from Pell grants for the needy.

The House Education and Labor Committee says the loan cuts will eliminate nearly 1 million students from eligibility. The Pell grant cuts would drop another 1 million students. The administration says those students would be eligible for higher-interest loans.

Bell defended the proposed cuts in student aid, saying they would only trim the program's growth, and would stop aid to "hundreds of thousands" of students who do not need it.

He added at one point, "We think we're still a bit too generous. We're not emasculating the student aid program."

The House Appropriations Committee already has voted to reject some cuts, and leading lawmakers from both parties have predicted they will not be adopted. But Bell said the administration is sticking with them.

PRESENTING

THE 1982 UNION PACIFIC SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS

EMPLOYE DEPENDENT SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM • AGRICULTURE SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM • MERIT SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM

The following high school seniors in Idaho have received 1982 college scholarships from the Union Pacific Corporation and its operating companies.

We congratulate each of these recipients and his or her parents on this honor.

Nationwide, these students are among the 150 Union Pacific scholarship winners who throughout their high school careers have demonstrated outstanding academic performance and leadership ability. They've worked hard and are extremely deserving of this recognition.

To these talented young men and women who will enter our colleges and universities this fall, we extend our sincere best wishes. We have every confidence in their continued success and bright future.

Sincerely,

John C. Kenefick
President,

Merit Taste Stands Alone.

Extensive research confirms MERIT proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking.

Landmark smoker study confirms that the majority of higher tar smokers who have switched to MERIT have one thing in common—Praise for MERIT taste.

Taste Debate Ends.

Nationwide survey reveals over 90% of MERIT smokers who switched from higher tar are glad they did. In fact, 94% don't even miss their former brands.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Taste Verdict: MERIT.

Further, extensive unmarked-pack tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared with higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

GM: Spurs must win all to shed 'choke' tag

By United Press International

The San Antonio Spurs may have to beat the Seattle SuperSonics in their playoff series to finally shake the "choke" label.

On the other hand, General Manager Bob Bass says, that might not be enough.

"It's not fair to this team but it's gonna take winning it all to get rid of that once and for all," he said following two games in which the Spurs strangled Seattle in the final minutes to take a 3-1 series lead.

"I get worked up about people calling this team 'chokers,'" said Bass, who knows his team has been at 3-1 before — and lost.

"We don't get the call against Billy Paultz in the (1979) series against Washington and we beat the eventual world champions in the semis and play for the title."

He did not mention in the same game — the seventh and deciding one — that the Spurs came up empty on five straight possessions in the final minutes to lose 107-105 and let a 3-1 lead vanish.

Only once in nine playoff series over the past eight years have the Spurs won. They beat Philadelphia 4-3 in 1979 before the cries of "choke" were heard.

Bass claimed the discordant sound emanates from the local media which "has to write something." Continual harping on it, he said, is not fair to the current Spurs because they are not the ones that lost all those series.

Indeed, only two Spurs — George Gervin and Mark Olberding — participated in the 1979 fold. Gervin remembers but defends the work ethic or previous teams.

"Every year we played hard but we just didn't win. The difference is that I think this year's team is simply a little better. We have more weapons to hurt people with."

In a 115-113 victory Sunday, Gervin's scoring in the series fell off 14 points but six other Spurs were in double figures. The heroes down the stretch were Dave Corzine, Mike Bratz and Mike Mitchell. Mitchell said he doesn't know what the hue and cry is about.

"All I know is I heard they got in the playoffs every year and didn't go anywhere," he said. "I don't know about that. What I do know about is this year this team made up its mind to go."

Coach Stan Albeck, who is in his second year at San Antonio, said, "We've got many new players on this team so whatever happened in the past does not apply."

The Spurs, getting good use from their bench, go to Seattle for Game 5 Wednesday and then back to San Antonio Friday if Game 6 is needed.

Bratz, a reserve guard, won Game 3, a 99-97 decision, with an 18-foot jump shot in the final second. The Spurs' third 2-point victory Sunday was decided by Corzine's rebounding and free throws.

And in Game 1, a 95-93 Spurs' triumph, Gervin got things rolling by hitting a game-winner.

"In past seasons," a longtime Spurs' observer said, "Gervin got tight in the playoff games and no one else could take the game-winning shots. No one else had done it during the season. So when George froze, you saw a lot of air balls."

Now, Gervin is getting some late-game help and the SuperSonics, for one, don't believe the Spurs are chokers.

The winner of the series will meet Los Angeles. Jamaal Wilkes and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar each scored 24 points Sunday to lead the Lakers to a 112-107 victory over the Phoenix Suns and a four-game sweep.

In other quarterfinal series, Philadelphia leads Milwaukee 3-1 in games and Boston is also up 3-1 in its matchup with Washington.

The 76ers can clinch a date in the semifinals with a victory Wednesday night when they meet the Bucks at the Spectrum in Game 5.

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham gave his team the day off Monday following rugged back-to-back games over the weekend in Milwaukee. The 76ers bounced back from a 92-91 defeat on Saturday to record a 100-93 victory Sunday.

Cunningham said it's important that his team maintain its intensity.

"You can be sure no one here plans to rest on his laurels," he said. "You need four wins to advance to the next round. To feel you can do it is one thing, but to do it is another. We're going to have to come out Wednesday night and work like the dickens."

The Celtics can retire the Bullets with a victory Wednesday night in Boston. On Sunday, Cedric Maxwell, Nate Archibald and Larry Bird each hit two free throws in the final 75 seconds to spark the Celtics. It was the 11th straight time the defending champions have won at the Capital Centre.

Ramsey, 6 others honored

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — Seven basketball greats, including four NBA stars, were inducted Monday into the Basketball Hall of Fame, adding their names to the 125 previously enshrined players, coaches and contributors.

The four NBA stars inducted were Hal Greer, a 15-year veteran of the Syracuse Nationals and Philadelphia 76ers; Slater Martin of the Minneapolis Lakers and St. Louis Hawks; Frank Ramsey, who created the "sixth man" role for the NBA in nine years with the Boston Celtics; and Willis Reed, captain of the 1973 New York Knicks championship team.

Inducted as coaches were Winston-Salem's Clarence "Big House" Gaines, the winningest active college coach, and the late Everett Case, who gained greatest acclaim during his 19 years at North Carolina State.

Al O. Duer, who headed basketball activities of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for nearly a quarter century, was the sole contributor enshrined this year.

Nebraska's 5-foot-9 Jack Moore was the recipient of the Francis Pomeroy Naismith Award, frequently called the "little man award," as the nation's outstanding senior college player under 6 feet.

Ramsey, 50, now living in Madisonville, Ky., said he never imagined being named to the hall since he never started for the Celtics during his career, but was generally the first player off the bench.

Of his nine years with the Celtics, seven were as NBA champions, including six straight, from 1959 to 1964.

"I didn't think it would ever happen. Being put in the Hall of Fame and being known as a substitute, it's almost impossible. It's just the ultimate compliment.

"I was very content with what I was doing. The team was winning. I was contributing. I would've sat on the bench all year just to get the ring," he said.

Reed, now coach at Creighton University in Omaha, Neb., called his enshrinement "a great honor." In 1970, he became the only player named MVP in the same year for the NBA regular season, All-Star Game and playoffs.

Greer, who's career spanned 15 years, spent five with the Nats and 10 with the 76ers, to play 1,122 games and

Boston's Dave Stapleton dives to complete inside-the-park home run before Twins' Butch Wynegar can make the tag

Rare homers spark Boston triumph

By United Press International

Homers aren't rare at Fenway Park but two players hit unexpected shots Monday night.

Dave Stapleton legged out an inside-the-park homer, the first at Fenway in nearly six years — and Rick Miller hit one over the wall — that's rare in itself — to lead the streaking Boston Red Sox to a 6-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Carl Yastrzemski had a pair of doubles and knocked in two runs for the Red Sox, who have won four straight and 12 of their last 13 for their best start since their pennant-winning year of 1946. The Twins lost for the 12th time in their last 16 games.

Stapleton's inside-the-park homer was the first in Boston since June 1976, when Butch Hobson homered off the Yankees' Rudy May. Miller's blast was his first of the season, naturally, and only the 23rd of his career.

Trailing 2-0 when they came to the plate in the first, the Red Sox started their rally off loser Terry Felton, 0-3, when Jerry Remy and Dwight Evans led off with walks. One out later, Yastrzemski, now hitting .351, doubled home both runners. One out later, Stapleton sliced a liner to right which landed inches away from the diving Mickey Hatcher. By the time center fielder Jim Eisenreich picked up the ball and relayed it to the infield, Stapleton was rounding third and beat the throw home with a head-first slide.

Rich Gedman led off the fifth with a double and scored when Miller followed with a liner into the Twins' bullpen in right field.

Eisenreich led off the game with a double off winner Chuck Rainey, 2-0, and Hatcher followed with an infield hit. Rainey then walked Kent Hrbek to load the bases and a fielder's choice by Randy Johnson and a sacrifice fly by Gary Ward brought home the Twins' runs.

Rainey allowed only one more hit in his five-inning stint and Bob Stanley pitched two-hit relief over the final four innings to notch his first save.

A's 5, Yankees 2

At New York, Dwayne Murphy knocked in two runs with a second-inning triple and a single in a four-run eighth to lead the A's. Matt Keough, 3-2, scattered seven hits, walked seven and struck out three in pitching his third complete game of the year.

Angels 5, Indians 4

At Cleveland, Don Baylor's ninth-inning sacrifice fly with one out drove in Rod Carew with the winning run to deal Cleveland its fourth straight loss. Carew opened the ninth with his third single and Fred Lynn walked. Carew moved to third on Reggie Jackson's fly and trotted home as Baylor backed Rick Manning against the center-field fence 400 feet away.

Orioles 6, Mariners 0

At Baltimore, Mike Flanagan pitched a three-hitter and Rich Dauer and Gary Roenicke knocked in three runs each with homers to pace the Orioles. Flanagan, 1-3, faced the minimum number of batters in allowing only four to reach first base.

Royals 3, Brewers 2

At Milwaukee, Greg Pryor homered and Hal McRae delivered a two-run double to highlight a three-run sixth that carried the Royals. Loser Mike Caldwell, 1-2, had given up just one run in his last 20 1-3 innings before the Royals' outburst. Pryor homered off a 3-2 pitch to lead off the inning.

Injured hand may force Hearns to delay bout with Hagler

DETROIT (UPI) — Thomas Hearns has injured his hand and may possibly have to postpone his scheduled May 24 World Boxing Council bout with Marvelous Marvin Hagler for at least a month, it was reported Monday.

Hearns' manager and trainer Emanuel Steward said Hearns, the former welterweight champion, hurt his hand while working out a few weeks ago and cannot punch at full strength.

"He hurt his hand when he was running a few weeks ago," Steward told Detroit radio station WJR Monday night. "As a result we thought (there) would be normal soreness."

Steward said the doctor that checked Hearns "thinks he needs 2 ½ to three weeks before he can resume punching with his full authority. We will have to wait until tomorrow (Tuesday) ... to make a final decision and if so we will have to move the fight back about a month or so."

Hearns and Hagler were scheduled to fight May 24 at the Windsor Arena just across the Detroit River.

Oops! Bucs drafted wrong player

By WILL McDONOUGH
Boston Globe

It is a favorite saying of anyone who ever carried the label "player personnel director" for an NFL team: "We leave no stone unturned when it comes to the draft."

They can make this assessment of their craft with a great deal of pride because they put so much effort into a year-long search that comes down to a crisis two days each year — the days the picks are made.

The scouting starts the junior year in college with most players. Reports are developed. Films are studied. Physical and mental tests given. The information is collected and fed to a computer, and in the end ...

Well, in most cases they do the right thing, which is to get the guy they want when it is their turn to pick.

But in last week's draft, there was a beauty when one stone was left unturned and became a giant rock, maybe the biggest ever in the NFL flesh auction.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers mistakenly picked the wrong player on the first round. They wanted Booker Reese, a big defensive end out of Bethune-Cookman, known in the trade as a real sleeper. Instead, they got Sean Farrell, a large offensive lineman out of Penn State, a can't-miss projection.

How did something that had been researched for so long and brought step by step through this almost mechanized system suddenly self-destruct?

Simple. The Bucs were boobed by The Tube.

Their man stationed at the NFL headquarters in New York on the Big Day — and we'll withhold his name for obvious (blush) reasons — became camera-shy at precisely the wrong moment. The scenario is:

Tampa Bay is next to pick on the first round, and suddenly the man sitting at the Bucs' table in draft headquarters spots the TV camera starting to zoom in over his shoulder. The draft was televised live on ESPN, and one of the gimmicks was that the camera would try to sneak a close-up of the team picking next.

In the drafting procedure, the team picking has its top brass at home making the picks and keeping tabs on the players available. When they de-

Leading Minico High to athletic victories Schow's forte

JEFF SCHOW
Loves pressure

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

RUPERT — They call him a winner.

He is that person, who, when the situation has reached its pivotal point, has that intangible extra that allows him to make the right decision or the big play. Similarly, he is that type of person who literally demands to be in that situation if there is anyway to manipulate it.

No playing it safe. No shunning responsibility. Just "gimme the ball" and watch.

For the past three years, that winner has been Minico High's Jeff Schow.

The number of times the second baseman's bat or glove or mind has come through for the Spartans goes beyond the count of Coach Rick Baumann.

It takes time for the opposition to realize that Schow is the one killing it because physically he's not impressive — 5-9½ and 155 pounds. Seldom does he kill a rally as a batter, rarely does he make the error that keeps the other team going and never, never is he out-thought.

"He is deserving of any recognition he can get," says Baumann, who blesses the last three years with Schow and frets over replacing him next year.

Schow, however, finds discussing his reputation embarrassing and difficult.

He finds most the reasons among his teammates and his coaches.

"They've always been competitive," he said of his senior class. "We played against each other in football, basketball and baseball when we were younger and it built up our competitiveness. We've always tried to beat the other guy out."

Schow believes it is "because there are so many" athletes in his class that intra-county rivalry in elementary and junior high school honed desire beyond the average. More impressive is how the Minico coaches and the boys themselves turned it into a positive momentum rather than letting it become a cancer of divisiveness.

"We've been playing together so long we just like to win. I do have a great coach and great teammates. We all play together and I think that's the reason we play well. We never give up," Schow said, which understates some of the miracle victories he and his classmates have pulled out in football, basketball and baseball the past three years.

That Schow is best known for his baseball player belies the early ambition of all-to-be Minico Spartans. Basketball is the game in the school and Schow acknowledges that sport dominates most discussion among the younger set.

The Spartans have had baseball for a long time but with little success until about 10 years ago when John Astorquia began building the program, concentrating heavily on American Legion summer play to stimulate participation and prowess. Baumann moved in behind Astorquia with, if anything, more dedication to the two programs.

Schow and the Spartans now foresee a continuing baseball program that may not always reach championship contention but will remain a strong trial horse for would-be contenders.

"It's kinda equalling out a little now. But there's probably still a little more on the basketball side," Schow said. He noted coming within an inning of winning the state championship against Borah last spring probably raised baseball to a new high among up-coming Spartans.

Twice during that tournament, once when the Spartans trailed by 10 runs in the first game, Schow came up with a clutch triple that seemingly broke the floodgates for the Spartans. That's when the state coaches started calling him a winner.

"I just like to be in a clutch place. It just seems like I'm always there at the time we need the hit. And now I kinda feel I'm the one who needs to come through. Most of the time I've been able to," Schow said, making the last part sound more like a prayer of thanks than a statement of fact.

"But you have to remember that it takes the rest of the team to get on base and set up the things that maybe I can do best."

Baseball is Schow's favorite sport and he hopes to continue playing it in college.

"I've had some (contact by colleges) but now much," he said. "I got a letter from Whitman and BYU and (CSI) Coach (Jim) Walker has talked to me a little bit."

Schow, a 3.2 student, plans on a computer science major because "I've taken quite a few math classes and that sounds like fun."

But in the meantime, it might be best for opposition coaches simply to walk him in critical situations and hope no one hits the ball in his direction later on during the game.

Because, somehow, Jeff Schow is going to find a way to beat you — and that makes him a winner.

Trio of Cub pitchers fail to contain Porter, Cardinals

By United Press International

National

Three pitchers were not enough to stop the St. Louis Cardinals in the seventh inning Monday night.

Darrell Porter's two-run homer capped a five-run seventh at St. Louis that snapped a 4-4 tie and carried the Cardinals to a 9-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Lonnie Smith led off the seventh when he was hit by a pitch from Dickie Noles, 3-3, and moved to second on a balk. Ozzie Smith and Keith Hernandez singled off Willie Hernandez, the second hurler, to break the tie and help the Cardinals to their fourth victory of the year over Chicago in as many games.

After Lee Smith relieved to try his hand and struck out George Hendrick, Dane Iorg singled in another run, Hernandez scored on a throwing error by catcher Jody Davis, and Porter smashed his third homer of the year over the right-field wall.

Porter had a feeling he was going to hit a home run.

"He told me, 'I'm going to go out of this tank,'" the Cardinals' Steve Braun said. "Sometimes you get that feeling."

"It was the fifth or sixth inning and I was getting a little cocky," Porter said. "I told Braun I was going to go deep.

"But I wasn't thinking about that when I got to the plate. I was only trying to hit a sacrifice fly."

Doug Bair pitched the final three innings in relief of Bob Forsch, allowing only one hit, to raise his record to 2-0.

The Cubs had rallied from a 3-0 deficit to tie the score at 4-4 in the sixth on a two-run homer by Leon Durham, his third of the year.

The Cardinals jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first on a bases-loaded sacrifice fly by Hendrick, who had missed the last six games with an elbow injury, an RBI single by Iorg and Porter's run-scoring grounder.

The Cubs scored runs in the fourth on Bill Buckner's triple and an error by Ken Oberkfell, and in the fifth on Gary Woods' leadoff single and a two-out double by Bump Wills.

St. Louis scored its other run in the fifth, when Lonnie Smith singled, stole second and scored on an error by Buckner.

Braves 10, Pirates 4

At Pittsburgh, Claudell Washington hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning and Glenn Hubbard went 4-for-5 and drove in three runs to lead the Braves. Washington's homer, his third, came off Eddie Solomon, 1-3, snapped a 1-1 tie and came after a walk to Brett Butler.

The Braves added three more runs in the fifth on a two-run double by winning pitcher Phil Niekro, 1-0, and an RBI single by Hubbard, and closed out their scoring with a three-run ninth that featured a two-run single by Hubbard.

Pittsburgh took a 1-0 lead on Jason Thompson's major-league leading ninth homer of the season — his sixth in eight games — in the second inning, but the Braves tied the score 1-1 in the third on singles by Bob Horner and Chris Chambliss and an RBI grounder by Rafael Ramirez.

The Pirates made it 7-4 in the sixth on a single by Lee Lacy, a walk to Thompson and a pinch-hit homer by Bill Robinson off reliever Larry McWilliams.

Expos 8, Padres 2

At San Diego, Bill Gullickson pitched a seven-hitter and struck out 10 and Chris Speier and Gary Carter homered to spark Montreal over San Diego.

Gullickson, 2-1, walked one in posting his first complete game in five starts.

Speier's homer, his second, tied the score at 1-1 in the third and Carter's homer, his third, came with a man on in the eighth and capped a three-run inning.

Phillies 5, Giants 3

At San Francisco, rookie Bob Dernier's fourth-inning double snapped a 3-3 tie and Dick Davis drove in an insurance run with an eighth-inning sacrifice fly, leading Philadelphia past San Francisco.

Sid Monge pitched five shutout relief innings to gain credit for his first victory in his initial decision and Ed Farmer finished up for his third save.

The Phillies scored three runs on three walks and two singles in the first inning off rookie Alan Fowlkes, but it was Dernier's double in the fourth that saddled reliever Dan Schatzeder with his fourth loss in as many decisions.

Gets warning for slamming ball

McEnroe escapes Johnstone's bid

NEW YORK (UPI) — Top seed John McEnroe overcame one scary patch of spotty tennis to beat Australian Chris Johnstone 6-4, 6-1 Monday night in the opening round of the Tournament of Champions.

Although the 21-year-old Johnstone is ranked only 103rd in the world, it was a notable hurdle for McEnroe since he was knocked out in the opening round of last year's tournament at Forest Hills by another unheralded player, Carlos Kirmayr.

McEnroe appeared to be breezing to a runaway victory when he swept through the first four games, but Johnstone returned the compliment by winning the next four games. McEnroe, though, broke in the next game and then held service at 15 to close out the set.

Although the 5-foot-9, 150-pound Johnstone managed to play McEnroe tight and provided him with a good opening-round test, the world's top-ranked player was in control of the second set, dropping only the second game when he lost his service.

McEnroe was given an unsportsmanlike conduct warning for slamming a ball into the stands on the final point of the second game, but he settled down after that to win the next five games.

While McEnroe managed to survive the first-round jitters, No. 8 seed Mark Edmondson of Australia became the second seeded player to fall, losing to Sweden's Stefan Simonsson 6-2, 6-4.

Simonsson, with a lowly ranking of 146, continually frustrated Edmondson's aggressive tactics with his patient baseline game on the slow clay court. The 22-year-old Swede won the first three games of the match, then came back from 0-2 in the second set to make the decisive break in the ninth game.

The two had played last week at Hilton Head, S.C., with Edmondson coming back from 2-4 in the final set to win.

"I don't feel mentally tough to stay out there long enough to wear him down," said the former Australian Open champion who is ranked 16th in the world. "I may be ranked highly, but it's not for play on this surface. I'm a serve-and-volleyer and I need a faster surface."

John Sadri, the 11th seed, recovered after losing the first three games to win his opening-round match from Julio Goes of Brazil, 6-4, 6-1.

However, No. 14 seed Shlomo Glickstein of Israel, although feeling weak from a recent tooth infection, defeated Marco Ostoja of Yugoslavia 6-3, 7-6. After squandering two match points on his service in the 12th game of the second set, Glickstein won the tie-break 7-3.

In other afternoon matches, Tim Wilkison defeated Van Winitsky 6-2, 2-6, 6-2; Australian Rod Frawley beat Tomas Koch of Brazil 6-4, 6-1; Chris Lewis of New Zealand downed Richard Meyer 6-2, 6-2; and Russell Simpson of New Zealand beat Jose Garcia of Spain 2-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Former Oklahoma player injured in alumni game dies during knee surgery

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (UPI) — Former University of Oklahoma defensive back Mike Babb died Monday during surgery for a knee injury suffered during the OU Varsity-Alumni game at Norman April 17.

A spokesman at Baptist Medical Center said Babb, 23, suffered a cardiac arrest while on the operating table.

During his four years at OU, from 1976 thorugh 1979, Babb, of Ada, made a total of 105 tackles, had seven interceptions, recovered three fumbles and broke up two passes.

Perhaps his most famous interception came in the 1979 Oklahoma-Nebraska game when he picked off a Cornhusker throw at midfield and returned the ball to the 5-yard line to end Nebraska's last threat in a game the Sooners won 17-14.

"Mike was a great player and a great leader for me," Sooner head Coach Barry Switzer said. "I can't think of a worse tragedy for our football program. We have been very fortunate through the years that something like this has not happened.

"We are all saddened by this and our thoughts and sympathy go out to his family."

Athletic Director Wade Walker said, "All of us who knew Mike are shocked at the news of his death. He was a quality member of our football squad, well liked and respected by everyone who knew him.

"It is a very sad time for the University of Oklahoma,' Walker said, "and our heartfelt condolences go to his family and friends."

Since leaving the Sooners, Babb had returned to his hometown of Ada, where he was operating a barbecue restaurant.

Services were pending Monday.

HRs power Depot win

TWIN FALLS — Three players hit homers Monday night as Depot Grill-Wickes defeated Royal Lounge 15-1 to highlight city softball action at Harmon Park and Frontier Field.

Bruce Thibodeau crashed two round-trippers while Ken Petersen and Kevin Nelson, who was 4-for-4, each had one homer during Depot Grill's romp. Clint Bingham accounted for the lone Royal Lounge run with a homer in the men's A League contest.

In other A League play, Tony Mannen and Jim Dawson each hit a homer to lead Wholesale Carpets past Twin Falls Bank & Trust 16-4. Ray Wolley homered for the losers.

Idaho Power blanked Sherwood's-Artic Circle 5-0 in a B League game.

In three C League games, Klover Klub-7-11 defeated Elsing Pump 7-5, Budweiser Light downed Local 283-White Satin 11-10 and Donnelley's took Miller Beer 9-1.

In women's action, Corner Pocket scored a 13-10 A League win over Donnelley's while Magic Valley Memorial Hospital took R & P Enterprises 14-4 and Norm's Cafe edged Mary Carter Cosmetics 22-15 in B League play. The details on home runs were unavailable.

No other results were reported.

cide on the player they want, they tell their man in New York (the phone line is kept open at all times).

The man on the scene puts the name of the player on a card and hands it to a runner, who sprints to the front of the room and hands it to NFL execs at the dais, and they announce the selection to the world.

Well, at this point, with the camera trying to peek at his name cards over his shoulder, the Bucs' representative tried to cover up, shuffling his cards. Almost simultaneously, he was told to inform league officials it was "Booker Reese, defensive line, Bethune-Cookman."

However, in trying to cover up, he handed over the wrong card. Instead of Reese, it contained the name of Farrell. Dutifully, the name was quickly announced by the NFL.

The Bucs' people, both in Florida and in New York, were stunned. Their man on the scene quickly looked through his name cards and nearly went into shock. He still had Reese's card. He tried to recover quickly, raced to the front and sought out the NFL brass, who quickly caucused. While this was happening, the New York Giants, up next, chose Butch Woolfolk, a running back from Michigan.

Each team is allotted 15 minutes to make a choice on the first round. Some use almost all of it. But, unfortunately for the Bucs, the Giants, who expected Woolfolk to be the player available to them anyway, didn't waste any time and chose Woolfolk almost immediately.

Because of this, Comissioner Pete Rozelle ruled the league was helpless to change the pick from Farrell back to Reese. He reasoned that if Farrell was still on the board, the Giants might have taken him instead of Woolfolk — an assumption that proved to be correct.

The Bucs' brass frantically made calls around the league to see if they could make a trade with the teams coming up on the board. They still wanted Reese. Finally, they caught a break. The Chicago Bears would give up their pick near the top of the second-round (sixth) if Tampa Bay would give them a first-round pick in 1983. Agreed.

After this, the Bucs bailed out and selected Reese in what now might be a stroke of luck, if not genius. Farrell is a bona fide first-round selection, and the Bucs can use offensive line help. Reese was a first-rounder in their minds, so they can rationalize that they came out with two first-round choices instead of one.

Chicago is happy because it got a first-rounder for a second-rounder, and next year's draft is supposed to be one of the best ever.

Naturally, people in the league who knew what happened (and not many did) would like to keep this story from getting around. But I see this camera moving in behind me, so ....

P.S. — When asked later if he would have taken Farrell instead of Woolfolk if Farrell had been available, Giants Coach Ray Perkins said he would have. But neither Perkins nor the questioner knew what had really happened with Tampa Bay. So on this testimony, Farrell should be a New York Giant, and Woolfolk and a whole lot of people behind him in line would have become the property of other teams.

Cavs' assistant gets Penn job

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The University of Pennsylvania Monday named Virginia assistant coach Craig Littlepage as its new head basketball coach.

Littlepage, a native of suburban Philadelphia who played for the Quakers from 1971 to 1973, replaced Bob Weinhauer. Weinhauer accepted the head coaching job at Arizona State last month.

The Penn search committee selected Littlepage from a list that included Penn assistant Tom Schneider and William & Mary Coach Bruce Parkhill. The Philadelphia Daily News said Littlepage was offered a three-year contract that would earn him $40,000 in the first year.

Olson, Tabb win track laurels

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pole vaulter Billy Olson and middle-distance runner Mary Decker Tabb were voted the outstanding athletes of the indoor track season Monday by the New York Track Writers Association.

Olson, in winning 10 of his 14 competitions, broke the world indoor record for the pole vault four times between January 29 and February 27. His record heights were 18-feet-8 ¾ in Toronto, 18-9 ¼ in Louisville, Ky., 18-9 ½ in San Diego and 18-10 in Kansas City, Mo.

Tabb was unbeaten in six indoor races. She lowered the world indoor record in the mile three times between Jan. 22 and Feb. 19, running 4:24.6 in Los Angeles, 4:21.47 in New York and 4:20.5 in San Diego. On Feb. 5 in Los Angeles, she set two world indoor records — 5:51.1 for 2,000 meters and 8:47.3 for 3,000 meters.

Baseball attendance strong

NEW YORK (UPI) — Despite a rash of snowstorms and cold weather that forced the postponement of a number of games, major league baseball attracted more than five million fans during April, the commissioner's office announced Monday.

April attendance was 5,009,065, second only to the record-breaking season of 1979 when the opening month crowd count was 5,119,235 en route to a final total of 43,550,398.

Average attendance actually was higher this year, 19,881 to 19,614 in 1979, but there were nine fewer April games in 1982 — 252 compared to 261 three years ago.

Baltimore, California and Minnesota have set single-game attendance records and Oakland drew the largest Opening Day crowd in the history of the franchise, which started in Philadelphia.

Los Angeles is the attendance leader, drawing 556,915 spectators, an average of 42,840 per date. San Diego is second at 386,214 and California third at 324,516.

McRae, Thompson honored

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kansas City's Hal McRae and Pittsburgh's Jason Thompson were named their respective league's Player of the Week Monday for the week ending May 2.

McRae won the American League honor on the strength of his 11-RBI performance against the Boston Red Sox and Toronto Blue Jays last week.

Six of his eight hits were for extra bases (three doubles, a triple and two home runs), adding to 19 total bases for the week. His RBI count included a five-RBI game and a four-RBI game, and one game-winning RBI.

McRae scored five runs, walked once, slugged at a .750 clip and had an on-base percentage of .346, while batting .320.

In the National League, Thompson had 11 hits in 27 at-bats for a .407 average. He hit five home runs, had 12 RBI, scored eight runs and hit a double. His on-base percentage was .484 and he had 27 total bases. He hit safely in all seven games the Pirates played and has an 11-game hitting streak.

Mazzei gets 10-year sentence

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Pittsburgh man convicted of sports racketeering in the Boston College basketball point shaving case was sentenced Monday to 10 years in prison.

Paul Mazzei, 39, was sentenced to the prison term by Judge Henry Bramwell in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn.

Mazzei introduced former BC basketball reserve forward Rick Kuhn and other Boston College players to gamblers who were shaving points on the Eagles' games during the 1978-79 season, authorities said.

Before sentencing, prosecutor Edward McDonald, a Boston College graduate, sent Bramwell a sealed letter indicating Mazzei was cooperating with the government. The nature of the cooperation was not disclosed but Bramwell said he took this fact into consideration in imposing sentence.

Horses

Gato del Sol flown to NY

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Kentucky Derby winner Gato Del Sol left Churchill Downs Monday for New York, bypassing — a chance to challenge Blue Grass Stakes winner Linkage in the Preakness at Pimlico on May 15.

The gray colt's co-owner, Arthur Hancock III, reiterated his decision to skip the second jewel of racing's Triple Crown and instead concentrate on preparing for the Belmont Stakes early next month.

"The horse has been shipped to New York and because of the sharp turns that favor the speed horses. And the track at Baltimore being one-sixteenth mile shorter we just believe it would not be to our benefit," Hancock said in a statement.

"We definitely like the horse," the statement from Stone Farm at Paris continued. "It (the Preakness) would be too hard on the horse. We feel if we go with a fresh horse (in the Belmont) it would be best."

Hancock, who co-owns the horse with Leone Peters, said he understood Linkage was concentrating on preparing for the Preakness and added, "The trainer (Eddie Gregson) feels that our horse is going to be best fitted for the Belmont. Everyone wants to do what is best for the horse."

Barring an unlikely change of heart by the owners, Gato Del Sol — who finished second to Linkage in the Blue Grass Stakes April 22 — will become the first Derby winner since Tomy Lee in 1959 to skip the Preakness.

After the Derby, Gregson said the decision to ship to New York instead of Baltimore and the Preakness was unrelated to the prospect of a rematch with Linkage, a convincing winner in the Blue Grass.

Show season begins Saturday

JEROME — The Magic Valley Division of the Idaho Slate Horse Show Association will have its first show of the season Saturday at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

The classes to be offered include halter, showmanship at halter, bareback equitation, Western Pleasure, Appaloosa, Arabian and quarter horse Western Pleasure, reining, horsemanship, Western riding, trail, English, three-jumping classes and barrel racing.

All-around awards will be given in four age groups: 11 and under, 12 to 14, 15 to 18 and 19 and over.

To earn year-end awards, membership in the association is necessary. Family memberships are $10 and individual memberships are $6.

A person doesn't have to belong to the association in order to compete. The entry fees are $2 for each halter and youth class and $3 for adult and open classes.

The Jerome show is the first of the season other all-breed shows are slated for June 26 in Gooding, July 10 in Burley and Aug. 14 at a site to be announced.

The Magic Valley Division of the association was formed last year and is a family-oriented horse group with members all over the Magic Valley.

For more information, please call Phyllis Knapp at 734-3513 or Myrna Alcorn at 934-5534 or 934-4495.

Other shows to be sanctioned by the association include:

Big Ten may test 3-pointer

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. (UPI) — The Big Ten Conference is moving to adopt an experimental three-point play for the coming basketball season, Commissioner Wayne Duke said Monday.

Duke said the NCAA Rules Committee recently asked the Big Ten and other conferences to consider using either a shot clock or a three-point field goal in an effort to speed up the game and reduce the use of stall tactics.

The Big Ten coaches voted unanimously to recommend to the conference athletic directors that a three-point play — rather than a shot clock — be used as an experiment, Duke said.

He said each coach is to submit to him by Friday a recommendation whether the three-point arc should be 19, 20, 21 or 22 feet from the basket. If none of those distances gets a majority vote, Duke said, the coaches will vote again between the top two vote-getters.

The recommendation then would have to be approved by the conference athletic directors and the NCAA rules committee, he said.

Asked if he feels the three-point play will be effective in stopping the extensive use of the stall, Duke said, "The coaches obviously feel it's worth experimenting with. All nine of them voted to try it."

Wisconsin, which currently does not have a head coach, did not take part in the vote.

Duke said the Big Ten is not particularly concerned with low-scoring games emphasizing long stalls because attendance continues to set records.

Duke also said the Big Ten coaches will ask the National Association of Basketball Coaches to recommend changes in the NCAA Tournament format.

The conference coaches want the NABC to recommend either that the problem of postseason tournament champions be dealt with or that the NCAA Tournament field be expanded from 48 to 64 teams, he said.

"Our coaches felt the strength of the championship field could be diluted somewhat if the number of automatic qualifiers isn't reduced or if that matter of the postseason tournament champions isn't addressed," Duke said.

No. 1 rebounder to become pro

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — LaSalle Thompson of Texas, the nation's top rebounder last season, said Monday he will skip his last year of college and submit his name for the NBA draft in June.

Thompson said he was leaving, in part, because Coach Abe Lemons was fired and his assistant, Barry Powd. ' was not selected as a replacement.

Thomspon, a 6-foot-9 junior center, has said he would like to play for the Dallas Mavericks.

STATE OF IDAHO
DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

In the Matter of the Repeal of the Existing Commercial Feed Regulations and the Adoption of Revised Commercial Feed Regulations

NOTICE OF INTENDED AGENCY ACTION

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE, that the undersigned proposed to repeal existing Commercial Feed Regulations and adopt new Regulations relating to Commercial Feed, pursuant to the procedure prescribed by Section 67-5203, Idaho Code, and that the authority for amending such regulations is provided by Section 25-2724, Idaho Code.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE that the undersigned proposes to revise the Commercial Feed Regulations in order to clarify the Department's responsibility regarding Customer Formula Feeds and update the permissible fluoride levels in addition, the revised regulations will delete the definitions of feed terms and refer to the Official Publication of the Association of American Feed Control Officials (AAFCO) for terms. This manual will be on file with the State Law Library, Legislative Council and the Office

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that a complete copy of the said regulations may be obtained from the undersigned at 120 Klotz Lane, Boise, Idaho, or by writing writing the undersigned at P.O. Box 790, Boise, Idaho 83701.

PLEASE TAKE FURTHER NOTICE, that the purpose of determining whether the proposed regulations will be adopted as stated above, any person or group interested in the matter may submit oral or written testimony to the undersigned on or before June 7, 1982, at the aforementioned address. This department shall fully review and consider all written and oral submissions concerning this proposal received or before this date. Unless twenty-five or more persons, a governmental subdivision or agency, or an association presenting a petition signed by not less than twenty-five members of the organization, make a written request for a general hearing on the proposed regulations on or before June 7, 1982, no such general hearing shall be convened.

DATED this 20th day of April 1982.

MAX HANSON
Director
Idaho Department of Agriculture

THE ACES® IRA G. CORN, JR.

"There is nothing more imprudent than excessive prudence." —Charles C. Colton.

A finesse in the club suit seemed both unnecessary and imprudent in the play of today's challenging hand. However, there is always the exception, as an unsympathetic dummy was soon to point out.

West led the club ace and another after East encouraged with his nine. Thinking it unwise to risk an "unnecessary" finesse, declarer won dummy's king. The heart jack was passed to West's ace and West exited with queen of clubs, declarer ruffing while East discarded a spade. The trump king failed to drop the queen and now, the contract was doomed. Eventually, East won the trump queen and the obvious diamond lead through South gave the defense five tricks for one down.

Declarer makes his contract if he can guess the distribution (West's bidding helps). The "imprudent" club finesse wins at trick two and the heart jack goes to West's ace. West cannot lead either minor gainfully and must shift to the spade jack. Declarer survives the third round of spades and West's failure to ruff assures the trump distribution. A fourth round of spades provides for a diamond discard from dummy and the contract becomes secure. East gets his heart trick but West gets only one diamond and declarer scrambles home with nine tricks.

Opening lead: Club ace

Should declarer have made today's hand? With all cards exposed, it's easy to say yes. However, had the hearts split 2-2, either the "unnecessary" club finesse or the failure to draw a second trump may have tossed an easy contract away.
